REFUSE PETITION FOR THRU CARS

Public Service Commission Continue Transfer Nuisance at Watertown Car Barn

The Massachusetts Public Service Commission which has been considering for several months a strong petition of patrons of the Boston Elevated Railway for thru cars from Nonantum square to Cambridge, and some relief from the present inconvenient transfer system at the Watertown car barn, made its decision this week, and refused to make the change requested by the petitioners. The full text of the decision follows:

Petition of patrons of the Boston Elevated Railway Company for a restoration of the through car service between Nonantum square in Newton and Harvard square in Cambridge, on which a public hearing was held March 17, 1915.

Complaint was made that patrons of the road boarding cars at Nonantum square and desiring to go to Cambridge or points between Watertown and Cambridge are obliged to transfer at Watertown car barn, about one mile distant; that not only are inconveniences for transferring at this point unsuitable and inadequate, but patrons are often subjected to annoyances and delays on account of poor connections.

Nonantum square is the business center of this section of Newton. Tracks of the Boston Elevated Railway Company run northerly and easterly through the square and one of the most important lines of the Middlesex & Boston Railway has its eastern terminus here. It appears, therefore, that in addition to the large number of people who live in the vicinity and who board and leave the cars of the Boston Elevated Railway Company at this point, there are many others who transfer between the two roads.

Formerly, the Oak square-Brighton line to Park street, Boston, and the Watertown-Mt. Auburn and Harvard lines terminated at Nonantum square, Newton. Since the opening of new Boston street subway these lines now terminate at the Watertown car barn, so that a passenger boarding a car at Nonantum square for Harvard square is obliged to transfer at this point. This change was made partly because of the congestion at Nonantum square, which has been a subject of complaint by the city officials of Newton and others for many years, and partly because of new conditions created by the operation of trailer cars along the rush hours on the Oak square-Brighton line and on the line between Watertown and Cambridge via the Harvard square subway. The operation of these trailer cars has been necessitated by the problem of providing for increased travel without unduly increasing the congestion of surface cars at the Park street station of the Tremont street subway and the Harvard square station of the Cambridge subway. As operation of these trailer cars is practicable without a loop at either point, the company has been obliged to build a loop at the Watertown car barn.

While Nonantum square has many advantages over Watertown car barn as a terminus for the lines in question, conditions are such as to make construction of a loop in the square impractical.

A suggestion was made that a loop be built on private property, contiguous to the square. This would facilitate the acquiring of a large piece of land, part of which is now covered with buildings, in the very heart of the business and residential part of Newton. The company could take this property without agreement with the owners and access to it could have to be obtained from the government of Newton. The expense of the project, together with possible objections that might be raised as to the use of property so located for such a purpose would seem to preclude further consideration of this suggestion.

Several other suggestions to obviate the transfer complained of were made by the petitioners. One was to extend the Harvard square line to the Oak square car barn. This barn is about 1 1/2 miles distant from the Watertown car barn, so that in every round trip there would be a duplication of service of three miles of line. This extra mileage on a 7 1/2-minute headway would amount to 112 round trips in fourteen hours, or 336 miles. Another suggestion was to run both lines through—that is, to terminate the Harvard square line at Park street and the Oak square-Brighton line at the North Cambridge car barn. This would be an exceedingly long run, which is contrary to good practice, and not conducive to good service.

In view of the above circumstances and conditions, the commission does not see its way clear to grant the request of the petitioners for a restoration of the through service from Nonantum square to Harvard square, and that part of the petition is dismissed. In relation to the complaint as to the facilities and the annoyances due to poor connections and poor transfer facilities at Watertown car barn, the commission is of the opinion that more satisfactory arrangements can and should be made, so that patrons of the road who are compelled to wait for connections at this point may have a suitable waiting station, with an employee or employees of the company in charge during hours that cars are in service, and that cars be run under such schedules and operating conditions as to reduce the present delay and inconvenience at this transfer point and to make the trip in either direction between Nonantum square and Harvard square as nearly continuous as possible.

It is therefore ordered, that the Boston Elevated Railway Company maintain a suitable waiting station on its premises at the Watertown car barn, with an employee or employees of the company on duty at all times when cars are in service, who will have charge of the departure of cars from this station and notify passengers thereof. It is further ordered, that the schedules for the arrival and departure of cars at the Watertown transfer station and the methods of operation of said station be so arranged by the company that the trips in either direction between Nonantum square, Newton, and Harvard square, Cambridge, will be as nearly continuous as possible.

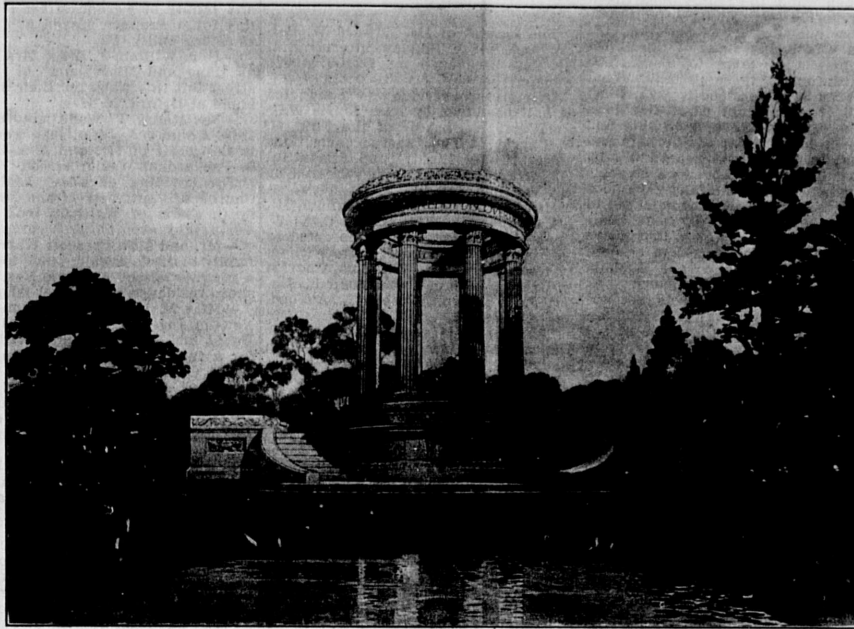

READ FUND PICNIC

The annual Read Fund picnic, made possible by the will of the late Charles A. Read of Newton, was held Tuesday. Ten special cars carried over 1100 children of wards one and seven, to Norumbega Park where the merry-go-round was engaged exclusively for their entertainment until noon. A substantial lunch was then served in the Cafe the tables being well filled four times before the crowd was satisfied. The Zoo and the excellent vaudeville entertainment in the theatre completed the day's program and it was a tired but happy crowd which rushed for the special cars at the end of the afternoon.

UNIQUE SERVICE

On the 4th at 10:45 A. M. a special service in the interest of race friendliness will be held in the Congregational Church, West Newton. Rev. Charles Fleischer will speak upon the Jews of America. Rev. Francesco Argento upon the Italians of America. Rev. J. Edgar Park upon the Irish of America. All seats free.

PROPOSED MEMORIAL TO MRS. EDDY

The many Christian Scientists of this city, which was the home of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, for the last year of her life, will be interested in the plans now being made for a suitable memorial to Mrs. Eddy to be erected over her grave at Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

The movement for a memorial began about four years ago, and the fund a year ago amounted to over $75,000. We are able to produce today an illustration of the memorial as it will appear. It is from the accepted design by Mr. Egerton Swartwout of New York city. The memorial, including a fund for its future maintenance, is estimated to cost $110,000. A general contract for its construction has been let to Mr. Elbert S. Barlow of New York city, and the work has actually been begun.

The site is not only one of great natural beauty, but on account of its grade has rendered possible a more picturesque and interesting treatment architecturally than would be possible on a perfectly level lot. The plot, which is approximately eighty feet square, slopes gradually from the level of the roadway to the lake with a drop of about 10 feet. The memorial consists of a circular open colonnade of eight columns, resting upon a stylobate of three steps, surrounded on the front by a circular platform slightly above the natural grade, from which a platform a double flight of steps leads to a lower platform at the lake's edge. The scheme has no prototype and is merely a screen of columns open to the sky, enclosed a flower-grown circle.

The material to be used for the memorial is white granite, the inscription in the frieze and upon the top of the pylons being of white bronze let deep into the stone work. The detail, which on account of the size of the reproduction is only indicated, is entirely floral in form and free in treatment, the wild rose and the morning glory being used as the main motives. It is interesting architecturally to note that while it is extremely free in treatment and not at all conventional, yet the effect obtained of a plaster model of full size, which is now in course of construction, is generally very classic in feeling. The extreme width of the memorial is about fifty feet, and the colonnade is eighteen feet in diameter. The columns themselves are fifteen feet in height and are similar in general character to those in the Clepsydra of Andronikos of Cyrrhus.

17. The program includes base ball games, athletic sports, tug of war, speaking by prominent gentlemen, refreshments, novelties and fireworks. Admission is free.

RECORD BREAKING MEETING

Aldermen Transact Large Amount of Business at Lengthy Session

The meeting of the aldermen on Monday evening broke the record for the amount of business transacted and nearly broke the record for the length of the session, adjournment not being reached until after one o'clock on Tuesday morning. President Blanchard was in the chair and every member was present until 11:30, when Alderman Rice left to take the midnight train to New York.

Hearings were held on petitions of the Telephone Co. for pole locations on Sterling street, Waverley avenue, on petitions of the Edison Co. for poles on Highland avenue and for joint ownership with the Telephone Co. on Watertown street, and all of which were subsequently granted. Also on petitions of the Newton South Storage Co., Rogers street, Joseph W. Crowell, Commonwealth avenue, for public garages, and of Rev. J. E. Kelly, Washington street, George B. Evans, Windsor road, Aug. T. Clark, Hancock avenue, James H. Ritchie, Hancock avenue, Purity Ice Co., off Beacon street, James K. Hemphill, Boylston street, Mrs. Mary Howard, Kenrick street and Manuel M. Enos, California street for private garages, and all of which were granted.

Mr. William F. Garcelon appeared in favor of the petitions of the Purity Ice Co. to locate two oil engines and to store 8000 gallons of oil on the site of its proposed artificial ice plant off Beacon street, Newton Centre and there was no opposition.

Hon. Albert L. Harwood appeared in favor of the petition of Fred T. Wiley for a public garage corner of Commonwealth avenue and Phillips street, Auburndale. Mr. Harwood said that the petitioner intended to build a garage of first class construction and that the business would be conducted in a first-class manner. Stanley H. Smith, Clarence C. Barbour, George S. Haddock and others appeared in opposition to the garage calling special attention to the proximity of other garages and stating that this would be of considerable detriment to their property.

Letters and petitions in remonstrance to this garage were read from George S. Haddock, Charles Curtis, Charles E. Fogg and N. C. Smith and others.

Mr. W. G. Starkweather opposed a sewer in Gibson road if he would be compelled to connect with it.

There were also hearings on laying of sewers in Gibson road, Simpson terrace, and Waban Hill road, north, for a concrete sidewalk on Hyde street, and for laying out, under the betterment act of Terrace avenue, Barnstable road and Harrington street.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

MISS GRACE M. BURT, Editor.

ANNUAL MEETING STATE FEDERATION

Wednesday afternoon, June 23, found Marion the Mecca of the club women from all parts of the State. The incoming trains and automobiles by the score brought constantly increasing delegations and the quiet little town was veritably alive with eager, expectant women. Nor was this an ordinary annual meeting. The fact that a resolution favoring equal suffrage was to be presented had aroused the supporters of both sides and many a delegate was on hand who had not usually attended the annual conventions of the Federation. Reporters were buttonholed by the "ardents" on both sides and it is hardly strange that some of the city dailies the next morning announced, "Women in row over suffrage." Excitement ran high, but at no time was there any "row." To be sure the "ants" voiced the suggestion of "disruption," while the suffragists emphatically denied the possibility. Many and many a conference was held on both sides and literature was circulated widely.

The suffrage resolution, however, was not to come up until Friday and the convention must settle itself down to business. On Wednesday evening there were informal department conferences and Prof. William Jay Hudson of the University of Missouri gave a short talk on "Constructive Peace." The songs and other entertainment given by the Misses Fuller were very much enjoyed.

On Thursday morning came the opening session in the Congregational Church. After the greeting by Mrs. Ann E. Luce, president of the Sippican Club, hostess of the occasion, and the response by Mrs. George W. Perkins, president of the Federation, came the annual reports of the officers, of the General Federation Secretary, the report of the Nominating committee and then those of the special committees, Badge, Meetings, and Press, by their respective chairmen.

Mrs. Sara T. S. Leighton, who has for thirteen years directed the Settlement Work in the Tennessee Mountains, in her report impressed the audience more deeply than ever before of the great value of this work which has been done by the Federation. And it is with a feeling of real regret that it has been abandoned.

The report of the Hospital Relief Work brought in tangible form another evidence of the power of federation and the chairman, Mrs. Royal Whitton, received prolonged applause from the delegates in recognition of all that had been done.

The reports from the departments of work opened with that of the Bureau of Information given by Mrs. G. F. Salisbury and was followed by that of Public Health by Mrs. Charles O. Tyler. After which came a brief presentation of the work of the American Society for the Prevention and Control of Cancer by Mrs. Clifton Sturge, secretary of the local Boston committee. She stated that with the exception of tuberculosis cancer is the most destructive disease; at the age of forty or over, in every eight women and one in every eleven men die from it. It is a controllable disease, and three-fourths of it may be prevented. The speaker emphasized the hopefulness of the disease when attacked properly.

The polls were open at the noon hour where everything was carried on in proper Australian ballot form. At the opening of the afternoon session the following new clubs were presented: Browning Club of South Easton, Chatham Woman's Club, Civic Club of Lee, Florence Nightingale Club of Somerville, Merrimack Woman's Club, Springfield Equal Suffrage Club, West Walpole, West Medford Woman's Club, West Village Woman's Club of North Reading, Worcester Equal Franchise Club and the Quincy Federation of Women's Clubs.

The rest of the session was given to the reports of the three so-called cultural committees, Literature, Music and Art, followed most appropriately by an address on "Beauty in our Cities" by Mr. Lorado Taft of Chicago.

Mr. Taft's address was enlivened throughout with humorous touches and at the same time contained much information and many truths often lost sight of as to the value of beautifying our cities. The foreigners, he said, misunderstand us continually. We are idealists and it is necessary for the good name of our cities that we show something beyond.

Mr. Taft would have some plan and some significance in the decorations with which we embellish our cities instead of sprinkling about our statues promiscuously. Many cities, he said, have too much sculpture. He expressed his belief in fountains. There is something alive and refreshing about them. We need these symbols of sweetness and joy in life. He closed his address with a description of the plans which he has for decorating the Midway in Chicago and of the fountains upon which he is already at work.

In the evening the Sippican Club tendered the delegates a reception and an entertainment consisting of music and a dramatic reading of "Mid-Summer Night's Dream" by Miss Iva Roberts.

Friday morning found the convention at a high pitch of excitement. A certain restlessness had characterized all the sessions. While close attention was given each speaker during an address, yet the moment one finished speaking the convention was alive and it was often with difficulty that the president brought them back to business. The first hour was taken up with the reports of Civil Service Reform, Conservation, Legislative, and Industrial and Social Conditions. The subject of "Unemployment Insurance" was presented by Mr. Ordway Tead.

In closing her report of the Legislative department for the season Mrs. Julius Andrews expressed a strong conviction that without the ballot Legislative work was well nigh futile.

Then came the report of the Resolution committee presented by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, chairman. The first four, 1. Endorsing the platform of the Women's Peace Party; 2. Urging the clubs to work for the appointment of police women; 3. For continued interest in and study of the legislative measures endorsed by the Federation at its mid-winter meeting; 4. That the raising of a State Endowment of $25,000 be postponed until financial conditions warrant; were all quickly out of the way with little difference of opinion. But the 5th: Whereas the question of political equality of men and women is today the vital problem under discussion throughout the world; therefore be it resolved, That we record our earnest belief in the principles of political equality regardless of sex, brought a debate which will not soon be forgotten. More than two hours was given up to the consideration of this resolution and never was the Federation more alive than at that moment. Over forty persons took part in the discussion and it was always on a high plane and free from disagreeable personalities. Of course the opposition tried to delay matters in every way possible, by questioning rulings of the chair, by a motion to table, and even by a motion to adjourn, failing in all these a ballot was called for, but defeated, and the final vote resulted in 203 to 99 in favor of the resolution. Prolonged applause followed the announcement of the result, but the meeting adjourned without further demonstration.

At the afternoon session came a report of the Conference for Rural Progress by Mrs. George M. Baker, the Federation representative, and the reports of the Education, Home Economics and Civics departments. The report of the Credentials committee showed the presence of 297 delegates during the two days and that of the tellers that the ticket presented by the nominating committee had been elected. Mrs. Lella C. Pennock, retiring first vice president, at the request of the President took the chair, declared, the officers, elected and presented the new officers. The Resolution committee brought in final resolutions of thanks to the hostess club and to others concerned in the welfare of the convention and the meeting was adjourned. A special train of six cars brought the returning delegates to Boston.

The officers elected are as follows: President, Mrs. George W. Perkins; first vice-president, Mrs. Claude U. Gilson; second vice-president, Mrs. Royal Whitton; third vice-president, Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney; fourth vice-president, Mrs. Arthur A. Hibbard; clerk, Mrs. Frank B. Hawley; assistant clerk, Mrs. Fred Richards Lufkin; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Arthur W. Lane; treasurer, Mrs. Lena R. Wellington; directors for three years, Mrs. Charles H. Blaine, Mrs. Hiram W. Fisher, Mrs. Irving O. Palmer, Mrs. J. E. P. Plimpton, Miss Carolyn V. Tucker. Nominating committee for 1915-1916: Mrs. Lella C. Pennock, chairman, Miss Agnes L. Dodge, Mrs. Willard E. Dow, Miss Mary C. Sweet, Mrs. William J. Webber.

Abstracts of the committee reports will be given next week.

cheap Gasoline Costs the Owner more per Mile

Only a few people know that there is more than one grade of Gasoline; and that V. M. & P. (Varnish Makers and Paints Naphtha) is being mixed with Motor Gasoline and sold to the Public at a Lower price to the Consumer; but at a Greater profit to the Dealer.

This Mixture does not give as much mileage; Carbonizes the Motor; nor does the Motor show as good Power or run smoothly, as on SOCONY Motor Gasoline which we are selling at 17 cents a gallon.

POLICE NOTES

Thomas F. Bradley of Webster street, West Newton, and his son, Thomas J. Bradley, were in the Police Court Monday morning, the former charged with threatening and his son with assault and battery upon Arthur S. Roberts, a Newton High School athlete. Associate Judge Copeland found the father not guilty and imposed a fine of $10 upon the son. He appealed and furnished $300 bonds. The trouble started last Wednesday when young Roberts, while walking along Oak avenue was asked by several boys who were playing ball on the West Newton Playground to throw over the ball which had been knocked on the lawn of Mr. Bradley. While he was picking up the ball, which was within reach without walking on the grass, he alleged that the younger Bradley assaulted and struck him twice while the two were rolling in the street. Against the father it was charged that he threatened several of the ball players if they continued to walk across his property.

DODDS—WEBSTER

The wedding of Miss Margery Stewart Webster, the daughter of Mrs. Catherine B. Webster and Mr. William Black Dodds of Cincinnati took place last Saturday evening at the home of the bride on Maple street, Newton, the ceremony being performed at 7.30 by Rev. G. Charles Gray, pastor of the Newton Methodist Church.

The bride was gowned in white satin with an over dress of white tulle and wore the conventional veil and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

An informal reception followed the ceremony until 9.30 o'clock, the guests being presented to the bridal couple by Messrs. C. H. Clark and O. H. Chase of Newton.

FRENCH BANQUET

The several French societies connected with the Church of St. John the Evangelist (French) at Nonantum enjoyed their annual banquet last Friday evening in the basement of the church. A Frechette was the toastmaster and the speakers included Fr. Grenier of Marlboro, formerly of Waltham; Rev. Fr. Joseph E. Robichaud, the pastor; Dr. J. A. Boucher of Waverlytown, Aldermen John W. Murphy and Reuben Forknall, Paul Champagne and Mayor Edwin O. Childs. All the addresses except three were delivered in French. There were more than 250 people present and an excellent musical program was rendered during the evening.

The general contract was awarded to D. A. Ferguson, the two lower bids being thrown out on account of technicalities. The heating was awarded to G. W. Thompson. The total estimated cost of the building is $6500.

CHESTNUT BLIGHT

To the Editor of the Newton Graphic:
Sir:
Newton has so many fine chestnut trees that any information regarding the chestnut-blight fungus, which is threatening all the chestnuts of New England, must be of interest.

Recent investigations have shown that the disease is transmitted from tree to tree by means of the powder-like spores which after any warm rain are carried by the air in great numbers to a distance of at least four hundred feet. During dry periods, on the other hand, there is little or no carriage of spores.

The obvious conclusion is that the diseased and therefore dangerous trees should be destroyed as early as possible and that dry weather should be chosen for the operation.

Yours respectfully,
M. A. WILLCOX,
Professor emeritus of Zoology, Wellesley College.

Do You Realize How Cheap Electricity Really Is?

Do you realize that Electricity is one of the few necessities the cost of which is constantly decreasing? Electricity is now so cheap that every home can afford it, not only for lighting but for the many other comforts and conveniences which it provides. Cartoonist Briggs has illustrated a few of these below.

Table Lamp

A 50 Candle-power Electric Table Lamp will give a cheerful, healthful and abundant illumination. Cost per hour, 1-2c

Coffee Percolator
An Electric Coffee Percolator will brew delicious coffee right on the dining table every morning. Cost per month, 15c

Closet Lights
Enjoy the convenience and safety of Electric Light in each of your closets. A 15-watt lamp, intermittently used, will light any closet; cost per month, 1c

Electric Grill
An Electric Grill can be used every day to broil, fry or toast, simply itself; cost per month, 13c

Floor Lamp
Sit where you choose; the lamp throws the light on book or work from any desired angle. Used every evening—cost per hour, 1-4c

For Instance
At the average rate paid by residential customers, the different kinds of service illustrated below indicate how inexpensive, with normal use, Electricity has become for the conveniences and necessities of everyday life.

Flat Iron
Comfortable, serviceable and inexpensive, an Electric Flat Iron may be used 40 minutes for 1c—15½ hours per month at this low cost per month, 26c

Curling Iron
An Electric Curling Iron heats quickly and evenly. Is always clean. Safer and more convenient than flame-heated tongs. Cost per month, 1c

Porch Light
Keep a 15-watt light burning continuously, all night; makes the porch cheerful in Summer—safer the year around. Cost per month, 10c

Hall Light
The hall may be kept lighted constantly from dark till bedtime, an average of 3 hours each evening at this low cost per night, 1c

Polishing Motor
Polishing silverware and cutlery is made easy with an Electric Pol

NEWTON TECHNICAL HIGH SCHOOL

One hundred and thirty-five young men and ladies graduated last Friday night from the Newton Technical High School and there was a large attendance of friends at the exercises held in the assembly hall.

The program was unique from the fact that the pupils gave actual demonstrations of the work accomplished during their school life.

The program included music by the school orchestra and the Girls' Glee Club, prayer by Rev. A. H. Robinson of the Newton Centre Unitarian Church, address on the Education for Stenography in the Technical School by Miss Ruth B. Spencer of the Clerical Course, an address on the Spirit of Democracy in the class of 1915 by Charles C. Parlin, president of the Student Council, some efficiency tests by Ralph W. Davis of the Business Course, a demonstration of the designing and making of a hall lantern by Wilbur F. Noyes, Jr., of the Fine Arts Course, the taking of a letter dictated on the stage by Mayor Childs by Miss Marian V. O'Connell, its transcription on the typewriter and displaying the completed letter on a stereopticon screen, the presentation of the class gifts of two pictures, a bookcase for the library and a cover for the table in the assembly hall by G. Elliot Stickney, president of the senior class, an address by Rev. A. J. Muste, pastor of the Central Church, Newtonville, and the presentation of diplomas by Mayor Childs.

The graduates were Gladys Earle Barnes, Edith Jane Bartlett, Margaret Eleanor Boughan, Grace Gertrude Bowen, Josephine Peirce Burgess, Mary Catherine Cilley, Mary Anna Clark, Mary Anna Clifford, Mary Alice Conlon, Cora Mary Cooper, Christina Agnes Degnan, Catherine Frances DeRusha, Rachel Elizabeth DeRusha, Gladys Campbell Diamond, Helen Julia Doherty, Cenary Elizabeth Earnest, Bertha Edmunds, Abbie Agnes Farrell, Lauretta Evelyn Farrell, Irma Loretta Finn, Mary Josephine Finn, Irene Josephine Foley, Sybil Freese, Katherine Gertrude Gannon, Martha Jane Gascoigne, Adele Marie Gilbert, Leah Gilfix, Helen Louise Gray, Agnes Louise Greene, Anna Loretta Hagerty, Marion Emma Hall, Harriet Esther Healey, Margaret Howard Hinkley, Lillian Ella Jefford, Edith Augustie Johnson, Frances Cecelia Jones, Katherine Julia Kelliher, Elinor Robin Kimball, Lucy Ellis Leacy, Clara Mae Leary, Mae Teresa Lonergan, Gertrude Catherine MacDonald, Jessie MacDonald, Margaret Belle MacDonald, Anna Bernardine Mahon, Agnes Elizabeth Mahoney, Esther Victoria Martin, Metelena Maxim, Catherine Mary McCarty, Alice Theresa McCourt, Evelyn Georgia McEhane, Elinor McPhoe, Mary Claire Mitchell, Nita DesBarres Morris, Gladys Elizabeth Norton, Marion Vera O'Connell, Theresa Anna Peppard, Rose Frances Quilty, Alice Genevieve Roche, Anna Bertha Seely, Ruth Beatrice Spencer, Elizabeth Maria Spinazzola, Eudokia Lulu Stames, Grace Helen Stuart, Gertrude Sullivan, Mary Esther Unsworth, Elvira Evelyn Ward, Margaret Theresa Welch, Mildred Victoria Wennerlund, Anna Frances Williams, Lorenzo Anthony Alberte, John Francis Allen, Carroll Francis Asbell, Rial Benjamin, Jr., John William Blakeney, Jr., Charles Thomas Brady, Charles Lawrence Bryson, Edward Irving Burleigh, Horace Robert Carey, Harry Edward Butler, Charles Edwin Gould Capon, Cuthbert Hamilton Carey, 3rd, Francis Caverly, Franklin Earle Conn, John Leo Connors.

CLASS PARTY OF N. T. H. S. 1915

The last gathering of the N. T. H. S. class of 1915 was held last Saturday evening in the school library, the occasion being that of the class party.

The first thing on the program was the reading of the class history by Stuart Murray. This class has established a record to be proud of. In their sophomore year they were the first class to present the seniors with flowers upon their graduation. As juniors they established the custom of giving a reception to the seniors. This year they have tried to promote a better feeling socially, between the Classical and Technical schools, and are jointly responsible for the establishment of a Student Council.

Edwin P. McGill next read the Class Statistics. Those voted upon were Charlie Brady and Mildred Wennerlund as class babies; Cuthbert Carey, class farmer; Archie Hagar and Margaret Mutch, class grinds; George Wiswall and Edith Bartlett, the best looking boy and girl; G. Elliot Stickney and Lillian Jefford, the most popular boy and girl; Ralph Daniels and Miss Roache, class nuisances; E. Perry, McGill and Miss Leary, class jokers; Miss Caroline Doonan of Wellesley and Mr. Horace Kidger, the most popular teachers; Jimmy Stang and Margaret Mutch, the most brilliant pupils; Oscar Everitt, class fuser; Donald Hunt and Miss Leary, class sports; Charles Capon and Cora Cooper, teacher's pets; Charlie Parlin and Mary Clifford, class talkers; Waldo E. Lupien, class cripple; and John Conroy, the class deacon.

The Class Prophecies for the girls was next read by Marion V. O'Connell followed by the boys' class fuser. Much hard work will be needed if the class intends to occupy the positions depicted in these prophecies.

Miss Margaret Hinkley, class poet, filled all the expectations of the students who elected her to that office.

The gifts which the class left to the school were a cover for the lecture table in the assembly hall, two pictures, and a book case for the library. The remainder of the evening was spent dancing.

THE 4TH IN NEWTON

The business men of Newton Corner have arranged for a display of fireworks to be given Monday evening, July 5th, at the Young Men's Christian Association grounds at 8.30 o'clock.

The committee regrets that a larger and more attractive program could not be arranged, but owing to present conditions in the business world, contributions of money have been very small in comparison to other years. However, sufficient funds have been raised to warrant giving the exhibition of fireworks and a cordial invitation is extended to all to witness them. If the weather is stormy, the display will be given on the next pleasant evening.

A ball game between the Y. M. C. A. nine and the Waltham Watch Co. team will be held at the Y. M. C. A. grounds at 1 A. M. which should be an attractive feature to those interested in the great game.

OPEN AIR PATRIOTIC MEETING

There will be another Open Air Service on the Y. M. C. A. lawn Sunday July 4th, at 5 o'clock. Rev. Harrie R. Chamberlin will be the speaker. Good music. All will be welcome.

THE DANCANT

The closing out-door dancing event of the summer season at Brae Burn took place Saturday afternoon and the large and enthusiastic number of dancers present, attested the popularity of these affairs, and regret that they were drawing to a close.

It was an ideal June day and Brae Burn with its picturesque surroundings, shady groves and sloping lawns, never looked more attractive. Tables were arranged around the bowling green, at which refreshments were served during the intermissions by the attendants at the Club.

The order included all of the modern society dances, and the tuneless selections by the 8th Mass. Regiment Band, were repeatedly encored.

This enjoyable affair which attracted fully five hundred guests of social prominence from Boston, Brookline and the Newtons, was under the direction of Mr. Harry L. Ayer.

Among those who entertained were: Mr. and Mrs. John E. Pushee, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Blodgett, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Safford, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Frost, Mrs. Ellery Peabody, Mrs. Horace M. Wheelock, Mrs. Thomas M. Whidden, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Lovell, Mrs. George Edwin Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner I. Jones, Mr. F. A. Snow, Mr. and Mrs. William B. H. Dowse, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Ayer of West Newton; Mr. George G. Livermore, Mr. and Mrs. W. Kirke Corey, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Darling, of Auburndale; Mr. James E. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Holbrook, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Stebbins, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver M. Fisher, and S. P. Burton, of Newton; Mrs. Henry A. Young and Mr. and Mrs. George B. H. Macomber of Newtonville; Mr. A. N. Slayton, Mr. Frank L. Richardson, of Newton Highlands; Mr. and Mrs. S. Harold Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Waldron H. Rand, Jr., Mr. E. Ray Speare, Miss Griffith and Miss Paul, of Newton Centre; Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Blaney of Waban; Mr. William E. Bright of Waltham; Dr. Horace Packard, of Boston; Mr. J. Clinton Thompson, Mr. E. Randall Norton, Mr. Alonzo Farnell, Mr. R. H. Stearns, Jr., Mrs. George A. Butman, Mr. George R. Angus, Mrs. Wiley, Mr. Edward H. Hoyt and Mrs. Egerton Chichester of Brookline.

BRAE BURN CLUB

The Annual Fourth of July celebration will be held Monday evening at Brae Burn. Music will be furnished during the evening by the 8th Mass. Infantry Band of Lynn. No one will be admitted to the grounds unless accompanied by a member, or upon presentation of a ticket.

A. O. U. W.

The third in the series of Socials given this year by General Hull Lodge, No. 123, Ancient Order of United Workmen of Massachusetts, was held at Dennison Hall, Newtonville, on the evening of Friday, June 25th, following a regular meeting of the lodge. It took the form of a Strawberry Festival and Musicals, and gave the members another opportunity to greet their lady friends, who turned out in goodly numbers.

It was one of those delightfully informal gatherings, which left a favorable impression upon the minds of all present and a desire for more of the same kind. The lodge was highly honored on this occasion, by having with them one recently elected Grand Master Workman, John B. Gallagher, who was accompanied by Grand Recorder Charles C. Fearing and D. D. G. M. W. Andrew T. Carlin, who were escorted into the hall by Brothers Henderson, Cabot and Cormier and received an ovation as they were severally introduced.

Each responded with a short but pleasing address, in keeping with his office, emphasizing the value of home protection, as exemplified and assured through membership in this, the oldest and best of all fraternal orders.

Compliments were showered on General Hull Lodge for its activity, personnel, development and liberality in providing such entertainments for its members and friends.

Several solos were rendered by Master William McAuliffe of Somerville, whose rare and beautiful soprano voice charmed all present. Whist followed the musical exercises, souvenirs being presented to the winners. Refreshments were served by Caterer Wright, after which, dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, the music being furnished by Knight's Orchestra. These socials will be resumed in the fall and some new and pleasing features added.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

D. Fletcher Barber Head of the National Retail Hardware Association

stated in these columns last week that Mr. D. Fletcher Barber of New Newton, was recently elected president of the National Retail Hardware Association, and the following article in the American Artisan Hardware Record will undoubtedly interest to his many friends in this city.

He is one of those who well remember the time when in many sections the traveling preacher was more on the minister and those of us who mind the hardships which were met by these missionaries of the faith will gladly give them credit for the work they have done. It is a small wonder that many of the association work and was the man who started the organization of the Massachusetts Hardware Dealers' Association which later developed into the New England Hardware Association and which is the oldest state organization of retail hardware dealers in the United States. It was formed in 1893 and Mr. Barber served as its president in 1896 and 1897, and later on, in 1910, was elected president of the New England Retail Hardware Association.

At the fourteenth annual convention of the National Retail Hardware Association he was elected second vice-president. He was promoted to first vice-president at the 1914 convention in Indianapolis and reached the highest honor in the gift of the National

NEW GARAGE RULES

Owners of Small Garages Will Be Saved Considerable Annoyance

City councils, boards of selectmen and motorists are to be relieved of much bother through a change that has been made by Fire Prevention Commissioner John A. O'Keefe of the Metropolitan district in the rules and regulations governing the licensing of garages. Under the rules of the commissioner, all garages, except some small garages erected prior to the passage of the law of 1911, were required to be certified by the City Council or the selectmen. This meant that the owners had to petition for a certificate, pay a fee, wait some weeks for remonstrants to appear if there were any, and then finally perhaps a hearing.

This process took up so much time of the city and town authorities and of motorists that some time ago a conference was held at the commissioner's office attended by city councilmen, selectmen, fire chiefs, building inspectors and others, in an effort to devise some plan to simplify the matter of garage licenses. The development of this conference is the new rule which is just about being promulgated.

Under this rule the business of granting certificates for garages for one or two cars, in which not more than fifty gallons of gasoline is kept, is transferred from the city council or the selectmen to the inspector of buildings. The inspector is required to visit the garage, and if he finds that it complies with the requirements for garages of its class, he is authorized to grant the necessary certificate. With this new rule in effect all the motorists will have to do will be to ask the inspector to look at his garage, and if it is all right, he will issue a certificate at once, under which the owner can keep one or two cars and a barrel of gasoline.

The business of granting certificates for large garages and issuing licenses for the storage of gasoline in excess of fifty gallons remains with the city council and the selectmen. The building inspector will notify the chief of the fire department of the garages he has inspected, and for which he has issued certificates. In this way the fire department will be in possession of full knowledge of all the garages in a city or town, their location and character.

BAD FIRE

The residence of Hon. Franklin E. Hutton, on Beacon road, Farley Hill, Newton, was badly damaged by fire about midnight Saturday night, box 82 being pulled at 12:30 A. M. by Patrolman Vedeccio, who first noticed the blaze.

The fire evidently started in the kitchen, where the servants had been using an electric iron on some clothes earlier in the evening, and it is said that they left the house in answer to a telephone message without disconnecting the iron from the electric current. The fire had made considerable headway before it was discovered and the department worked hard for about three hours before it was extinguished. The loss is estimated at $3000. The family are at Nantucket for the summer.

CITY HALL

Mr. I. W. Hastings of the City Engineer's office is spending his annual vacation at Green Harbor, Mass. Agent Russell of the Board of Health is spending a few days with his family at Antrim, N. H.

Only two bids for the plumbing in the Williams school house were received the past week. R. H. James Co. $1600, and H. W. Orr Co. $1654. The appropriation is limited to $1500.

GONE TO WEST POINT

Local Militia Officers to Have Week of Instruction

At 8 P. M. Saturday, July 3rd, the Training School, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, left Boston for the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., for a week's camp of instruction. The privilege of camping with the U. S. Cadets has never before been granted and will not be granted again very soon. The Training School consists of enlisted men from all over the state and from all branches of the service, selected and trained with the idea of their becoming militia commissioned officers. Kirk V. Everson of Newtonville has already been commissioned a lieutenant. M. V. M., and has been ordered to accompany the school to finish his course of instruction. Other members of the school who will perform the tour of duty at West Point are Sergt. Edmunds, C. Co., Fifth Regiment, M. V. M., of Auburndale, and Corporal Charles U. Hatch, C. Co., First Corps Cadets, M. V. M., of West Newton. This tour of duty is considered the finest opportunity for instruction and observation ever granted to members of the militia of any state. The school will arrive in Boston about 6:30 A. M. Monday morning, July 12th.

OUR NATIONAL HOLIDAY

Rain Seriously Interferes With Program of Its Safe and Sane Observance

The Fourth, or rather the glorious Fifth, was quietly and sanely observed in this city, with the remarkable record of but one fire alarm being rung during the entire 24 hours and that proved to be false. There was also another false alarm at 11 P. M. the night previous, but that doesn't count in the record of the day. The noise, what there was of it, didn't begin until six o'clock and was far from being as annoying as in former years.

The sultriness of the day with its occasional showers undoubtedly helped keep down the enthusiasm of Young America and also put a damper on the celebrations which had been scheduled in some of the different villages.

Newton Upper Falls had the most elaborate program and managed to carry out its plans for the forenoon, an account of which will be found elsewhere. The afternoon and evening program will be given tomorrow.

Waban held its children's sports in the afternoon and postponed the remainder until tomorrow.

Newton Centre ran off a parade in the forenoon consisting of the school children and veterans of the Grand Army, but when it arrived at the playground, there was only time for a few innings of baseball between the married and single men, before the rain caused the crowd to disperse.

The usual fireworks and hand concert were held on Crystal Lake in the evening and attracted a large number.

The Newton Business Men wisely decided to abandon the full program which has been given for the past two years and only gave a few fireworks on the Y. M. C. A. grounds in the evening. The display, which was fairly good for the money it cost, was witnessed by a crowd of about ten thousand people.

An account of the celebration at the Brae Burn Country Club is printed in another column.

WABAN'S FOURTH

The Track and Field Sports on the playground were interrupted by showers and the Class A events for boys were the only events finished and Ainsworth Rane won the cup for this class.

EDITORIAL

The action of the alderman in voting $400 for the purpose of making a wider doorway in the wall of the Technical High school in order that two old automobiles owned by the city can be run into the basement of the building and used by the Vocational school pupils for experimental purposes, seems to be an absolute waste of money. No one will question but what the experience gained by actual work on automobiles will be of some educational value to the few boys who will have the opportunity, but as there is a statute against work of this kind on private cars and as the city has adopted the "Ford" policy in its automobile department for the future, it would seem as if the two machines which are to be used at the school might be taken apart and carried into the building, instead of building a concrete runway and cutting thru a wall two feet thick.

The new sick pay and vacation ordinance just adopted by the city government was due to the unfortunate condition which was created by the sickness and death of the former City Solicitor Mr. Stocum last fall and winter.
The new ordinance endeavors to establish a uniform method regulating the length of time city employees are entitled to full pay and then to half pay during sickness, with some slight advantage given to persons who have been longer in the service of the city.
The ordinance also provides for a list of persons to whom the customary vacation of two weeks without loss of pay may be given.

While the jitney bus problem is one for lawyers rather than laymen, it would seem reasonable to suppose that the persons who pay money while in the city of Waltham, and do not leave the vehicle until it reaches Nonantum square, are really paying for the entire distance, and not for a ride to the boundary line between the two cities. The fair and common sense way of meeting this situation is to place the entire transportation question, whether street railway or jitney, with the Massachusetts Public Service Commission and treat it on a comprehensive and proper basis of service to the public.

The proposition to light Nonantum square with one hundred candle power incandescent lights, or, ornamental poles, which has been favored by the city government, should appeal to every one who has occasion to pass thru that busy section of the city. The policy of asking the section interested to contribute towards the cost of the ornamental posts is also wise and would prevent charges of discrimination being made from other parts of the city which are not interested in this matter.

With contests for the Republican nominations for county commissioner, sheriff and possibly for county treasurer pending, Middlesex county promises to be a fertile field for political activity the next two months. As the county has been Democratic for the past few years on the head of the ticket, the utmost care should be taken to select not only the best possible candidates but men who can poll the full Republican vote.

It is a matter of regret that the city officials responsible for the plans for the proposed city garage were too ambitious and the budgetary authorities were considerably in advance of what had been expected. The matter is too good a business proposition, however, to be abandoned on this account and it is surely possible to erect a less expensive building than was first planned.

Quick action was taken on the matter of enlarging the Roger Wolcott school at Waban and the $65000 authorized will provide accommodations probably sufficient for the next five years in that rapidly growing community.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

RICHARD

Shall the Proposed Amendment to the Constitution Enabling Women to Vote be Approved and Ratified

"POPULATION, NOT AREA"
Women are now voting throughout about half the territory of the United States. This naturally worries the opponents of equal rights. To lessen the force of it, they tell us that "population votes, not area," and they point out that most of this country's population still lives in territory where women do not vote.

This is true, but not to the point.
Bigness of population proves nothing on the woman question. China has more people than the United States,
the British Isles, Germany, France, Spain, Italy, Austria, Belgium and the continent of South America combined;
but this does not prove that it is a good thing to bind women's feet. India and China together have a larger population than all the rest of the world; but it does not follow that the rest of the world ought to adopt their way of treating women.

In the early years of the equal rights movement ninety-nine hundreds of this country's population lived in States which denied women access to collegiate education and to the professions, and if married, to any share in the control of their property, earnings or children. That was no good argument against a change.
Each State that adopted a more broad-minded policy liked the outcome; and the new ideas spread from State to State. The suffrage idea is now going through the same process. The question is one to be determined by equity and experience, not by density of population. The suffrage States as yet have fewer people than the non-suffrage States, but on this particular subject they know what they are talking about. "An ounce of experience is worth a ton of theory." A. S. B.

SUFFRAGE

Women were recently given full suffrage on the same terms as men in Denmark. On June 5, the anniversary of the signing of the first constitution by Frederick VII in 1849, the new Diet unanimously passed the new constitution providing for equal suffrage and abolishing special electoral privileges heretofore exercised by the wealthier classes. King Christian signed the constitution in the afternoon.

Copenhagen was the scene of great rejoicing. A large number of women composed of all classes marched to the palace, where King Christian received a delegation which in behalf of the women of Denmark thanked him for their political emancipation. A deputation of women also went to the Parliament and thanked the Government for conferring the franchise on women. Henceforward June 5 will be the Independence Day of the whole nation.

Several significant facts stand out regarding this new victory for political equality.

The war raging all about Denmark did not prevent the country from giving women the vote. All constitutional changes were temporarily set aside last winter because of the war, but this spring the question came up with renewed force. The proposed bill passed both houses in April, and the question immediately went to the country. The bill was so popular in Denmark as to bring about a remarkable election. Its popularity re-elected the lower house unanimously, without a single opposition candidate being put up. The upper house was also re-elected and the constitution went through unanimously last Saturday.

Denmark is one of the best educated nations in the world. According to a report made Dec. 3, 1914, by H. W. Foght of the U. S. Bureau of Education only one person in every thousand in Denmark is unable to read and write, as compared with seven out of every thousand in the United States. The people are so imbued with the value of education, says Mr.
Foght, that they will go to any extreme-ity to keep their children in school.
Of 269,000 Danish children of school age, only 370 failed to attend school in 1911. It is an unusually well educated nation that has realized the value of giving its women the ballot.

Women have already shown their ability as voters. In 1907 they were given the right to vote for and to serve on boards of public charities, and in 1908 won municipal suffrage for tax-paying women and wives of men who paid taxes.

SPEAKS FOR WOMANHOOD

New York Supreme Court Justice
Charles L. Guy made an eloquent "plea for equal suffrage based on democracy" in the New York World last Sunday. The six-column article embodying his creed closes with the following paragraph:
"If mankind men believe in democracy, if they believe in the women who gave them birth, if they believe in the women who are their comrades and companions in life, who make their homes happy, who make their lives successful, who stand by them faithfully in every emergency of life, they will register their verdict
—a verdict that will stand for all time —that in the eyes of an American freeman the dignity of American womanhood stands side by side and the equal of the dignity of American manhood. Not man above woman, not woman above man, but man and woman side by side, comrades and companions through life's journey, and God over all and for all forever."

OPEN AIR SERVICE

Next Sunday afternoon on the Y. M.
C. A. grounds there will be an open air service at five o'clock for men and women. Rev. Geo. H. Parkinson of Newton Centre will be the speaker.
William Hanson, tenor soloist at Grace Church, will sing, and an orchestra under the direction of Mrs. A. S. Fling will assist in the music. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

NO

One of the most popular suffrage bromides is the remark, made to anti-suffragists "I'm surprised that a woman of your intelligence should be an anti". The Antis have their own opinion both of the intelligence and the manners which prompt such remarks.

Dr. Charles L. Dana the noted neurologist of New York, says as to the intelligence of the suffrage zealots:
"Women seem, so far, to have taken in large measure the suffrage question, not intelligently, but obsessively. It is adopted as a kind of religion, a holy cult of self and sex, expressed by a passion to get what they want. There is no program, no promise; only ecstatic assertions that they ought to have it and must have it, and of the wonders that will follow its possession. There are many quiet, sensible women who honestly believe in this cause, but often the active and aggressive workers and writers who think themselves so clever are definitely defective mentally.
Measured by fair rules of intelligence testing, I should say that the average zealot in the cause has about the mental age of eleven."

As I walk down Fifth Avenue and see the garish and vulgar display of "Votes for Women," with its tables of half-true statistics, I feel that I am confronted with the originalism of a noisy and selfish propaganda, and I am forced as a conscientious citizen to take a stand; and I urge that the energies and magnificent capacities of women for promoting good causes be spent just now on more acutely needed lines and more fruitful fields.

When the Rev. Anna Shaw, the leader of the National Suffrage Association says that she wants suffrage no matter what evils follow in its train, and when the leaders of the Ohio suffragists, Mrs.
Harriet Upton, says: "We, in Ohio, are willing to break the ten commandments to get suffrage," it is clear suffrage is to them an obsession.

Dr. Dana also says:
"To me this insistent demand of "Votes for Women" is a distant and selfish cry—an echo of the childish demand: "I want my doughnut, and I want it now!"

"Voting is not a right denied, but a privilege granted. If we give votes to women, we do not expect perfect integrity in legislation. If voting by women could be shown to add to the happiness, efficiency and progress of the State, women ought to vote."

"It has not been shown so far that votes by women have added to the real value of government; until it has done so, there should be a decent pause and a co-operation in work on social measures which we know are urgent and workable."

"For example, the questions of disease prevention, of infant welfare, of mental and moral defects, of immigration, of unemployment, of labor, of housing, of education, and also the problems of our country's defense. The air is filled with cries for help, and for all these cries and problems there is need of study and work."

"Furthermore, we know that we can by such study and work achieve something. There is no battle line as to these matters. We are all agreed that they need our attention and our best efforts and that such efforts will secure reward and make an assured contribution to human progress. But women voters—will they help or mar? We do not know. Apparently they do nothing."

The suffrage "hopperie" is a new amusement invented by the Publication Committee of the Empire State Campaign Committee, of which Mrs.
Norman de R. Whitehouse is President. Mrs. Whitehouse will be the head of the game tonight and will stand at the top of a map of the United States laid out on an incline plane over which the hoppers will hop to victory or defeat. Mrs.
Ethel Watts Mumford is to be the first to enter the contest, and following her will be a number of guests of honor, led by General Rosalie Jones, commander in chief of the suffrage like.

Mrs. Mumford will carry a big cornet of suffrage caramels when she enters the game, and at the top of the incline will present it to Mrs. Whitehouse, who will carry a bridal shower bouquet of flowers in yellow, blue, and white, the Campaign Committee colors.
Mrs. Mumford will then recite limer-icks of her own invention, while Mrs.
Whitehouse tosses flowers and candy to the crowd, and Miss Ethel Lloyd Patterson, to attract hoppers to the "hopperie" will beat the big bass drum, which is one of the aids to suffrage used by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

These amusements seem eminently suitable for the mentality of an eleven-year-old child. As a demonstration of woman's ability to conduct our government they are open to question.

"This is the talk of 'the eight million women who work in store, factory and shop,' and who need the vote. There is no such number thus engaged. Every farmer's wife who sells a dozen eggs occasionally to a neighbor is included in this eight million gainfully employed, as well as every little cash girl in the shops who could not vote for years. According to the United States census those women really in 'store, factory and shop' who are old enough to vote number 3,988,899.
Competing with these three million women in industry are 25 million men.
If as suffragists say, 'men have established an absolute tyranny over women' and they cannot get what they want without the vote, will some suffrage statistician kindly explain how three million women are going to take anything away from twenty-five million men with the vote?"

POLITICAL NOTES

The Republican State Committee has made its annual apportionment of 2328 delegates to the State Convention to be held this fall. Newton will have 29 delegates, 3 from Ward one, 7 from Ward two, 6 from Ward three,
4 from Ward four, 7 from Ward five,
7 from Ward six, and 5 from Ward seven.

A Famous Old Abbey.
Melrose abbey is in Roxburghshire, Scotland, in a beautiful situation between the Eildons and the Tweed. David
I. of Scotland founded an abbey at Melrose in 1136. It was several times torn down and rebuilt. The present famous ruins are what is left of the abbey built largely by the gift of Robert Bruce in the fourteenth century. They are the property of the dukes of Buccleugh and are carefully preserved. The abbey was a cruciform building in the decorated and perpendicular styles, with pronounced French influence.
Much of the nave remains, with the two transepts, the chancel and the choir, two west piers of the tower and the sculptured roof of the east end.
Sir Walter Scott has immortalized the east window in "The Lay of the Last Minstrel." The heart of Robert Bruce is buried at the high altar. Sir William Douglas, "The Knight of Liddesdale," James, the second earl of Douglas, and Alexander II., king of Scotland, are also buried in the abbey.—New York Times.

Didn't Discharge Him.

In the financial district they tell a story of a bank that was in difficulties several years ago and how the clearing house happened to learn of the situation. One of the big national banks was clearing for a certain other bank that was in trouble and every day the president of the clearing house bank would certify $2,000,000 worth of checks for the other. Finally the paying teller called the attention to the fact that he was taking a mighty long chance, but the president paid no attention to the hint. Then the teller informed the clearing house of the situation, and the president was called to book. "Did my paying teller tell you you that?" demanded the president.
"He did," replied the chairman of the clearing house committee. "I shall discharge him at once," declared the president, bristling up with indignation.
"You do and we'll close your bank tomorrow," calmly replied the chairman.
Needless to say, the teller was not discharged.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Falstaff and Yarmouth.

Yarmouth has a claim upon all Englishmen quite independently of its associations with the breakfast bloater. For it was the home of Shakespeare's Falstaff, who appears to have been a man of exemplary piety. The Falstaffs were an old Yarmouth family.

"A Falstaff or Falstaff," writes John Richard Green, "was a bailiff of Yarmouth in 1281. Another is among the first of its representatives in parliament, and from that the members of that family filled the highest municipal offices. John Falstaff, a man of considerable account in the town, purchased lands at the close of the fourteenth century in Calster, and became the father of Sir John Fal-staff, who, after a distinguished military career, was luckless enough to give his name to Shakespeare's famous character. In Yarmouth, however, he was better known as a benefactor to the great Church of St. Nicholas."

Europe's Richest City.

The richest city in Europe is Basel,
the great Swiss railway center, Zurich,
in a neighboring canton, coming second. This is proportionate to the number of inhabitants. Basel's richest citizen boasts a fortune of £500,000, another has £300,000, while no fewer than sixteen residents pay income tax on a total of millions of dollars. Eighty-two are "French millionaires," possessing fortunes of a million francs. The average wage earning capacities of the various professions form an interesting contrast. Basel's doctors—the place is flooded with medical men—are the worst paid, averaging only £240 a year; druggists are good for more, and lawyers the same. Professors, on the other hand, earn something like £500 a year and bank directors anywhere from £1,000 to £1,200.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Statue of Brick.

Perhaps no other nation in the world save the inventive Germans would have thought of building a statue of brick. In the little city of Vegesack, near Bremen and in the district of the German clay fields, the citizens have erected such a statue to one of their number who won fame as an African explorer. The monument is of brick, thirty feet in height, including the pedestal. The architect molded the figures of a man and camel out of a solid mass of clay, which was burned in a great kiln and then saved into brick sized blocks.

A Herculean Task.

The bridegroom was intensely serious.
"My dear," he said to his little wife
—they are always little, "you have a hard task before you. Now that we are wed, you will have to prove to my four sisters that you are worthy of me."

Marriage In Java.

In Java when a man marries he goes to his wife's house, where the women sit in council upon all matters of importance and dictate the affairs of the home.

Child's Day In Belgium.

St. Nicholas day, which is Dec. 6, is the day on which the Belgian child expects a new toy. It is the Belgian ers, but she does ask us to avoid discovering them when there is no need.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

MISS GRACE M. BURT, Editor.

The following abstracts have been made from the various committee reports made last week at the Marion convention of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Home Economics Department

The past year has been one of unusual activity in the home economics field. This is doubtless due, in part, to the increased economic pressure on every home in the land, and in part, to the fact that homemaking is now recognized as a business for which special training is necessary.

Our first work of the year was an exhibit of labor saving devices at the Domestic Science and Pure Food Exposition held in Mechanics Hall during the month of October.

During the past year this committee has cooperated with the Massachusetts Agricultural College and with the New England Home Economics Association in giving free lecture courses for the purpose of presenting to as many women in the state as possible information on subjects pertaining to homemaking and to arouse interest in a state-wide campaign of education on the subject of home economics.

We have also in cooperation with the Women's Municipal League carried on a campaign for the extermination of the house fly in this state. The "Talks to Homemakers" which were an experiment in 1914 have ceased to be an experiment and were continued this past year as a part of our regular work. Taking in consideration the present economic conditions, these talks were planned to bring practical information to the home maker and club woman.

Our last work for this year was preparing a "Booklet" of suggestive programs, outlines, bibliographies, and topics of discussions. This, obviously, is for the use of the home economics chairman in planning the work for the coming year, and was arranged in response to the many letters received each summer asking for suggestions or for definite information along these lines. In arranging our work for the coming year, let us have in mind the definition of home economics as adopted by the American Home Economics Association: "Home Economics as a distinctive subject of instruction, is the study of the economics, sanitary, and esthetic aspects of food, clothing, and shelter as connected with their selection, preparation, and use by the family in the home or by other groups of people," and let us also realize that there is a needed place for home economics in the club work, if only to emphasize the truth to a critical world that the women's club movement is not blazing and beating a path that leads away from the home, but is steadily giving to the home better knowledge and higher ideals.

Katherine W. Herron, Chairman.

Music Department

There was never a time when musical activities revealed such a land of promise, and this is due to the encouragement which music receives from the public. There is such a willingness among people to be interested in music, that money is spent freely for it, and business organizations have come to regard it as a distinct asset. Therefore with such interest and attention, the work of the music department has decided advantages.

During the past year, as heretofore, the department members have worked with enthusiasm and at each monthly meeting, thoughts and suggestions for broadening the scope of the work have been forthcoming. Each year, more clubs are following the lines of work planned, and so far, reports have been gratifying.

Following the two Outlines for Study presented in previous year a suggestive list of books upon musical subjects has been printed for class work. Lists will be mailed upon application.

The closing of the Boston Opera House suggested a problem greater than any confronted by the department, yet, if endorsed and supported by the large number of women represented by the Federation, a problem worthy of consideration. Massachusetts has a new conception of Grand Opera. Hayrah Hubbard has roused and developed an interest in it, and has taken away from it, all mystery and formality. He has in his preliminary talks, shown the possibility in Boston, of an Opera unique in America. He suggests and has emphasized the need of more Opera in English—arguing that if English is as good enough for Shakespeare, it is good enough for Opera.

Numerous letters describe the splendid work in club music, and the opportunity for greater musical service for our department is growing. Indeed, the growing interest in music throughout the country has been to some extent the result of the excellent music work done in clubs. With this in mind, it is proposed to federate all music chairmen, and music committee members, and to arrange for occasional meetings in Boston next season. If feasible, meetings will be held, that those interested may labor together for a greater community interest in music. Our slogan is "More Music." Music has a message for every home, and when each home is being reached by this message, the work of the music department will have been perfected, for through a vital interest in and a greater appreciation of music, people will understand (1) the courtesy of "absolute silence" through a musical performance; (2) the importance of inculcating a good musical taste in children; (3) the necessity of the parent's help in developing this taste; and more than all, (4) the joy of living in a community where harmony prevails.

Mrs. Edward R. Newton, Chairman.

Art

The Art department has held five conferences during the season of 1914-1915, two of which were held in the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. The programs were mainly devoted to addresses and discussions relating to the best methods of developing a true appreciation of beauty by the study of pictures and other art objects. Paintings and lantern slides shown by the Museum were used in illustration.

Two conferences held in other cities were devoted to Arts and Crafts, both incidental to exhibits arranged by the hostess clubs. A fifth conference was held at the Massachusetts Normal Art School in Boston, for the purpose of acquainting the club women of the State with the important work done by the institution, its far-reaching influence on the industrial art of the country, and its imperative need of a new building which it is hoped the State Legislature will authorize next winter.

The Art Committee meets monthly to discuss methods of helping the clubs in their art study, and this year it has revised and reprinted the "Suggestions for Picture Study" prepared two years ago. This leaflet has received the commendation of such competent art teachers as Henry Turner Bailey and Rossiter Howard. From reports it appears that about one third of the Federated Clubs in Massachusetts are interested in some phase of art. This interest is shown by study classes and classes in handicraft lectures, by organized visits to art museums and monuments, by annual subscriptions to the Boston Art Museum, by exhibits of paintings and of arts and crafts, by presenting pictures and prizes to schools, and by assisting art students.

The Art Department makes four recommendations for club work the coming year: First, that each club appoint a committee to make a study of the worthy architecture, sculpture, mural painting, stained glass, etc., that may exist in the immediate vicinity, and report to this department with descriptions and photographs when possible.

Second, that the clubs interested in Arts and Crafts take steps to develop the art quality in the work of their handicraft classes, by encouraging the study of good design, and the frequent observation of Museum collections which are so rich in beautiful examples. Also that in their exhibitions a competent advisory committee pass upon the articles entered in order to gradually raise the standard of work and further the education of the workers.

Third, that the clubs interest themselves in the work of the Massachusetts Normal Art School, and assist in creating a public opinion throughout the State that will demand proper buildings and facilities for its further development.

Fourth, that the women's clubs embrace the opportunity to subscribe to the fund for securing Dali's noble statue of Anne Hutchinson which is to stand in the vestibule of the Boston Public Library, opposite the statue of her friend and disciple, Sir Henry Vane. Mistress Hutchinson, excommunicated for heresy and banished from the Puritan Colony in 1637, was the first leader of the first woman's club in America, and as such deserves recognition by her numerous successors.

Helen A. Whittier, Chairman.

Education

The Education committee experienced a severe loss at the very beginning of the club season of 1914-15 when its honored chairman, Mrs. Ellice Carlyle Ripley, resigned to accept the chairmanship of the Education Committee of the General Federation. The work has been carried on by the committee as far as possible as Mrs. Ripley had planned it.

The constructive activities of the committee have been applied especially to secure the investigation of Moving Picture theatres and to arouse interest in the education of the immigrants in Massachusetts.

Miss Mary Wilcox of Newtonville has under the auspices of the committee, written and published three valuable pamphlets entitled, "The Education of the Foreign Woman," "English for Immigrant Woman," and "A Board of Immigration." There is a gratifying interest in this subject, and at least forty clubs are doing definite work for the immigrants in their communities. Clubs report work not only in the two directions mentioned but also in the various other types stressed by the Education committee, to wit: arousing interest in Vocational Education, co-operating in the formation of Parent-Teacher Associations, forming classes in Training for Citizenship, lectures on Peace and forming classes in Local History.

About two hundred clubs have Education committees or do work that may be classed as educational work. A definite effort has been made this year, urging clubs having no such committee to incorporate one into their organization. Many clubs support Student Loan Funds or Scholarship Funds and have done so for many years.

Mrs. W. S. Ripley, Jr., Acting Chairman.

CONSERVATION

It is a fortunate Conservation Department that finds itself in a state which has a Conservation policy. Massachusetts has such a policy.

The Conservation Committee of the State Federation has aimed to keep in touch with the State policy. The Committee meetings have been miniature conferences with addresses by able speakers. The subjects have followed a logical sequence: Conservation in its broadest interpretation; Birds and Bird Protection; Moths and other Tree pests; Good Roads with special reference to National Trails and the Lincoln Highway; and an illustrated stereopticon lecture on Town and City Improvement, with special regard to Parks, Playgrounds, and Roadside Planting.

The awakening interest in these subjects is apparent in the many requests for study outlines and for information as to practical work. In order to meet these needs, the State Committee has given much thought to the preparation of a circular which has been sent to every club Conservation chairman in the State and to others upon request.

It is pleasant to note in this connection the encouraging reports from clubs co-operating with other town agencies and with a general interest in civic matters, especially in beautifying town centers and triangular plots. There were thousands of school gardens last year under the joint direction of the State Board of Agriculture and Women's Clubs.

A Conservation report for 1915 would not be complete without a word in regard to Good roads. Good roads are of greater value than ever, and transcontinental highways are merely the development of a movement, that within the last twelve months has grown with increasing rapidity all over the country. Railways carry more than nine billion tons each year. This is but a fractional part of that moved over our highways.

We are today probably twenty years ahead of where we would have been, had it not been for the motor-car and the motor-truck. "The motor-car has crystallized sentiment," says Henry B. Joy, president of the Lincoln Highway Association. "The Lincoln Highway stands for the 'greatest economic force in road commerce'."

But this age calls for beauty along with road perfection. The women of Massachusetts are now the custodians of the roadside planting of the Lincoln Highway and the Lincoln Way work is a special feature of the Conservation Department of each State.

Massachusetts already has good roads, but "No other state has a Lexington, a Plymouth Rock, a Bunker Hill."

Our ways thither are consecrated for they have been trodden by the feet of patriots. It is now the privilege of Massachusetts women to add beauty to conservation. Proud indeed are we of a share in this great nation-wide undertaking.

Mary Caroline Sweet, Chairman.

LITERATURE AND LIBRARY EXTENSION

The work of the department bears fruit as an indirect influence. We have emphasized the value of contemporary literature and have demonstrated our ideas wherever possible. In general, clubs report work done in the contemporary period of literature. Drama study, production of plays, reading of poetry, book reviews, ordered study of action, calling attention to contemporary books of value, are the methods most frequently employed.

During the year about 450 copies of the course of reading, Social Ideals in Contemporary Literature, have been distributed. Remaining copies of our first leaflet have been exhausted. If these facts are correctly interpreted, must we not conclude that the women of Massachusetts are reading with the conscious purpose to secure through literature a sympathetic understanding of this complex life to which we so seriously dedicate our efforts.

Women's responsibility for the mawkish sentimentality of much current fiction and drama has been urged with emphasis and a degree of justice. A recent article by an English critic assails vivaciously the "taste of the middle-aged woman" to which greedy publishers pander to the detriment of better literature. The grain of truth in his arrangement suggests a renewed effort to take ourselves out of the "Weary Giant" class of readers and dedicate our reading time to the vital and essential books of this and all ages.

The courses of study prepared by the General Federation harmonize with the plans being promulgated by our department of Education in relation to our alien population. For that reason and because these studies are an effort to secure through their literature a sympathetic understanding of the several European nations represented among us in large numbers, we are recommending these outlines for group study and individual reading.

prepared and published by the department. This is a working program with references, which we hope will be of assistance to the clubs which are willing to give attention to this most vital subject.

With the increasing complexity of modern public business, and the additional demands which yearly are made on the State and National public service, so much greater becomes the necessity for efficiency of administration. It is the essential need of this efficiency, which alone can prevent public waste, and thereby guarantee public economy, that should constitute the great incentive to women's clubs to work for the complete establishment of the merit system. To impress upon the minds of the youth of today who will be the citizens of tomorrow that personal efficiency and not partisanship and favoritism constitute the only guarantee of good government, is a work to which the women of this country may well devote their time and energy. Carelessness and indifference on the part of citizens are the greatest enemies of good government, and while much progress in Civil Service Reform has been made, yet constant and earnest work is still needed that the standard thus far attained may not be lowered.

Lottie A. Leach, Vice-Chairman.

Civil Service Reform

Early in the club year, the following suggestions for practical work were sent to the presidents of all federated clubs of the state, with the hope of obtaining greater activity in the work of this department:

Inform yourselves of the meaning and value of Civil Service Reform. Have a committee of one or more who will call the attention of the club members to legislation and other matters affecting the efficiency of the Civil Service. Urge educational work along these lines in the public schools. Offer a prize for the best essay on some phase of the Merit System, where co-operation of school authorities can be secured. Know to what extent civil service is applied in your own town or city. Investigate and report the conditions in local almshouses or other houses for the unfortunate. Base all criticism upon accurate knowledge. Help this committee and others by letting them know what you are doing. Make and ask for suggestions. This briefly summarizes the work which women's clubs may do for the advancement of this important factor in good government, the extension of the merit system.

Legislation affecting the Civil Service has been followed, and it is gratifying to report that all state bills adverse to the Merit System were defeated, including the Spanish War Veteran's Preference bill, which the Federation has annually opposed. Need for active opposition was not thought necessary this year. The most constructive and important piece of legislation was the passage of a bill placing all positions at the House of Correction of Boston, at Deer Island, under Civil Service Rules.

It is to be regretted that Federal legislation has removed a number of Civil Service employees from the classified list, thus weakening the merit system, notwithstanding the fact that the administration was pledged "to honestly and rigidly enforce the law pertaining to the Civil Service, to the end that merit and ability should be the standard of appointment and promotion rather than service to a political party."

From the answers which have been received from clubs, in response to the question in the "Bulletin" What has your club done this year to further the interest of Civil Service Reform, and to extend a knowledge of its value? We find several clubs offered prizes for the best essay on some phase of the Merit System to the pupils in the public schools. As a preparation for the writing of the essays, several clubs furnished speakers who created the interest, and gave valuable information. A number of clubs also interested teachers in presenting the subject to their pupils in Civil Government, history and English classes. For what this committee considers of first importance, the information of members, several clubs had lectures on the subject.

It is a pleasure to receive these reports of activity in the clubs, but we do not consider that the federated clubs in general give the attention to this subject which its importance merits. We believe, however, that a lack of information and definite method has been the cause of the inactivity of some clubs at least, and it is to meet this need that an "Outline of Suggestions for the Advancement of Civil Service Reform through the Agency of Women's Clubs" has been

Only a few people know that there is more than one grade of Gasoline; and that V. M. & P. (Varnish Makers and Painters Naphtha) is being mixed with Motor Gasoline and sold to the Public at a Lower price to the Consumer; but at a Greater Profit to the Dealer.

This Mixture does not give as much mileage; Carbonizes the Motor; nor does the Motor show as good Power or run as smoothly, as on SOCONY Motor Gasoline which we are selling at 17 cents a gallon.

Keeping in Touch

When the up-to-date man wants to take a day off, a week-end trip, or even a month's vacation, it doesn't sigh "to get away from a telephone."

Like the late E. E. Harriman, he makes the telephone a servant, not a master; uses it when he deems it desirable to keep in touch with business affairs; and refuses to let it intrude upon his leisure without warrant.

One talk daily to the office or factory, and—to a limited period, at least—the rest of the day belongs to the man who has the right kind of an organization.

There will be no toll charge on Particular Party Call if you are not connected with the person whose name you have given to the Toll Operator.

TWO KINDS OF PEOPLE

I. There are two kinds of people on earth today: the sinner and saint, for it's well understood, good are half bad, and the bad are all good. The rich and the poor, for to rate man's wealth, must first know the state of his science and health. The humble and proud, for in life's span, puts on vain airs is not counted a man. The happy and sad, for the swift ing years each man his laughter and each his tears.

II. The two kinds of people on earth mean, the people who lift and the people to lean. The reverer you go, you will find the rth's masses always divided in just these two asses. Oddly enough, you will find, too, ven, re's only one lifter to twenty who an. Which class are you? Are you eas- ing the load, vertaxed lifters, who toll down the ad? re you a leaner, who lets others re? portion of labor and worry and re?

DEATH OF MRS. HILTON

Mrs. Celesta J. Hilton passed away Saturday, July 3rd at Auburndale, after an illness of about ten days. Mrs. Hilton was the widow of the late Gustavus H. Hilton, a prominent business man of Boston, and a member of the wholesale hardware firm of Callenae, Rogers and Hilton. The deceased was well known in Boston social circles, and was a sister of Mrs. Cobb, wife of a former mayor of Boston. She had made her home for many years at the Woodman hotel, with her only son, Mr. G. Arthur Hilton, a Boston attorney, who died about a year ago. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at the hotel. Impressive services were conducted at 3 o'clock by Rev. Dr. Stebbins of the Unitarian Church at Milton. The burial was in the family lot in the Newton Cemetery. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

COLE-WILLIAMS

One of the prettiest home weddings of the season took place on Wednesday evening, June 30th, when Miss Mildred Hinckley Williams, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Williams became the bride of Mr. Harold Wallace Cole of Abundale. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride on Church street, Newton, by Rev. John Matteson, of Whitman, formerly rector of the Church of the Messiah at Abundale, the house being most attractively decorated with palms and roses for the occasion. Miss Williams was given in marriage by her father and wore white silk and chiffon with pearl trimmings and her veil was fastened with a coronet of orange blossoms. Mrs. W. C. Bennett, of Wollaston, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and George Frederick Bennett, a nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer. Flowers were scattered in the path of the bride to the altar by Elizabeth and Carolin Magee of Winthrop, cousins of the bride. The best man was Mr. Howard Everett Cole of Abundale, a brother of the groom. The beauty of the Episcopal marriage service was enhanced by Lohengrin Wedding march played by Miss Hilda Joyce of Ipswich, pianist and Mr. Noel Terrio of Waltham, violinist. The ushers were Messrs. W. C. Bennett of Wollaston, George A. Schofield, Jr., of Ipswich, Herbert Kelly of Arlington and Alfred Girty of Brookline. A reception followed the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Cole being assisted in receiving their friends by Mr. and Mrs. Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lloyd Cole.

The bride is a graduate of the Wheelock Kindergarten school, '14 and the groom is in the lumber business in Cambridge.

After September 1st Mr. and Mrs. Cole will be at home at 70 Hammond street, Cambridge.

DEATH OF MRS. KNOWLTON

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Knowlton, wife of Mr. William A. Knowlton, died on Saturday, at her home, 25 Hancock street, Abundale, after an illness of several weeks. She was born in Natick in 1856, being the daughter of Alpheus W. Burks and Fanny Hale (Bartlett) Burks.

She was a graduate of the Framingham Normal School and before her marriage she had taught in the Natick public schools. She was married in 1883 and later made her home in Abundale, where she was prominent and active in Woman's Club work and in the affairs of the Abundale Congregational Church, of which she was a member. She was vice-president and president of the Abundale Review Club for several years and at the time of her death was a member of the civic committee of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Knowlton leaves her husband and three children, Harold W. Knowlton, Milton L. Knowlton and Mildred Knowlton, all of Abundale.

Services were conducted at her home on Wednesday by Rev. William C. Gordon, D. D., of the Abundale Congregational Church, assisted by Rev. David N. Beach of Bangor, Maine. Musical selections were sung by the Lotus Quartet of Boston, and the floral tributes were many and beautiful.

BRAE BURN CELEBRATES

Among the attractive features of the evening was the music by the 8th Massachusetts Infantry Band of Lynn, which was so good that the musicians were obliged to respond to repeated encore. After the fireworks, the guests enjoyed dancing on the bowling-green which was brilliantly illuminated with electric lights of different colors, and the scenic effect as viewed from the piazzas of the Club was beyond description.

During the evening automobile parties arrived in large numbers from Boston, Brookline and the Newtons, and dinner was served to about 225 guests.

Among those who entertained were Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Ayer, Mrs. George R. Whitten, Mr. and Mrs. Elery Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Emerson Fales, Mr. John A. Potter, Mr. George Edwin Peters, Mr. F. W. Albee, Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Pushee, Mrs. Harry L. Burrage, Dr. David W. Wells, Mr. R. H. SUFFRAGE AT MARION

If the State Federation of Woman's Clubs which met at Marion last week could have foreseen the result of its vote upon woman suffrage would it have taken that vote?

The quiet and innocent little clubs which meet during the winter for sociability, recreation or study, find themselves dragged into the limelight of politics and their anger is only equalled by their former indifference. Steam roller methods are somewhat out of date just now, and might be not right in this country at least.

To me the question of woman suffrage is as personal a matter as my religious connection or my position upon slavery or intemperance. It is a matter of sober convictions.

I do not believe that this country would be made any better by an increase in the number of voters either male or female, and from what I observe of the way the suffragists use the power which they obtain occasionally I think the country would be very much worse off if they had further powers.

I have seen some of the worst "ward politics" used in these suffrage organizations and this affair at Marion is of the same kind. Against a minority vote of one third of the members and without any permission from the 65,000 members whom these presidents are supposed to consider somewhat, these suffrage women pass a vote approving suffrage in Massachusetts! As a club member and as a free minded woman I say No! You do not and cannot represent me in this matter! You cannot bring my club into politics any more than you can say what church I shall attend, and it is outrageous that such an attempt should be made.

If I needed any further demonstration of the unprincipled and shameless methods to which women are able to resort in order to carry a point I have found it in this vote which was taken at the meeting in Marion. No, Mrs. President, please remember you do not represent me, and only 64,999 club women are going to vote for woman suffrage this Fall.

MRS. H. R. TURNER.
 Abundale, June 29, 1915.

TERMS, $2.00 A YEAR

HOW NEWTON IS GOVERNED

First of a Series of Articles Explaining the Management of the City

The business affairs of the city of Newton are in the hands of a mayor and board of aldermen, with a school committee as a semi-independent body in exclusive charge of educational matters.

The duties of the mayor are almost entirely confined to the initiation of ideas, and to the supervision of the executive departments, and it is hard-possible to describe his functions in all in a newspaper article. He is elected for a term of two years, the age from the former plan of annual elections, having been made during the administration of former mayors, United States Senator John Weeks, and until the recent administration of Mayor Hatfield, was understood to limit each mayor to a single term. The mayor is also a member of the school committee.

The board of aldermen is composed of twenty-one men, elected three from each ward, one being elected annually the voters of that ward, and two being elected on alternate years for two years each, by the entire city. The board organizes on the first day of January by the choice of a president and a vice-president. It also elects a city treasurer and a clerk of the board each year, and the city clerk and comptroller of accounts for terms of three years each. The aldermen also have the power of confirmation over most of the appointments made by the mayor.

en vehicles for hire, to locate steam engines, etc. The bulk of the work on licenses comes in April, as most licenses expire by statute on April 30th. As there are always hundreds of petitions, and as the committee usually grants hearings on the most important matters, the meetings are always long and arduous, some of them lasting until the wee small hours.

While each city government has the right to act as it wishes on these matters, it has become the policy of the city to grant but twenty junk licenses, to refuse licenses for pool rooms where any considerable remonstrance is made, to impose careful restrictions on power boat licenses, and to limit the number of Common Victualler licenses.

The consideration of matters relating to city buildings is a new function of this committee, having been added to its work a year or two ago, because the work of the committee on Public Works had become a trifle too strenuous. The committee gives careful consideration to the so called special repairs to our public buildings, usually relating to such matters as changes and improvements in heating and ventilating, painting and repairs involving any large expense, the smaller repairs being handled by the Public Buildings Commissioner under the $20,000 appropriation for maintenance of Public Property. In this connection, this committee, as well as the other committees, travels close to the line which the city charter stipulates shall divide the executive and legislative branches. Neither the committees nor the board of aldermen can dictate to the executive departments as to how the money appropriated for city business, shall be expended but the board, usually acting thru its committees, has the undoubted right to refuse to make the appropriation unless satisfied as to the merits of the proposition. The erection of new school houses, or other matters involving a considerable appropriation, is usually handled by the aldermen authorizing a small appropriation for plans and for obtaining bids under such plans, and when these bids are obtained, the whole matter is again considered by the board and its committee, before the principal appropriation is authorized. The matter of erecting a city garage is now being acted upon in this matter, the bids received being larger than at first estimated, negotiations are now under way to cut down the plans, and thereby reduce the cost to a point which the committee and the board deem reasonable.

The committee on Public Works has much important work to consider throughout the entire year. In the spring it usually gives a large amount of time and attention to the annual appropriations for the routine work of the Street Department, with which it has the most to do. Petitions for the laying out of streets, either under general law or under the law authorizing the assessment of betterments, for the laying of concrete sidewalks under the betterment law, for street sprinkling, for the laying of water mains, or any work done by the Water Department, and for the construction of sewers, are acted upon by this committee. The aldermen have power to lay sewers in public streets without notice to the abutters, altho every sewer now entails an assessment of 20 cents a front foot and one cent per square foot of area for a distance of 125 feet from the street line. Where sewers are to be laid in streets which are not yet accepted as public streets, a hearing has to be given and every abutter notified, before the board can legally take action. From $40,000 to $50,000 is usually expended annually for sewer work.

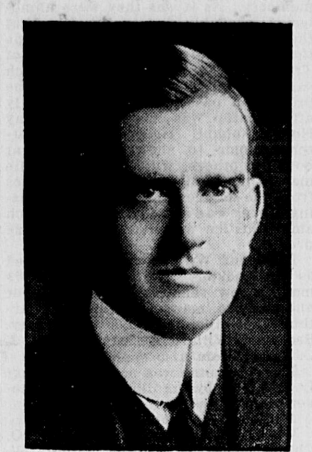

While concrete sidewalks can be laid on direct petition of the abutter to the street.

Mr. L. D. G. Bentley Selected by Governor Walsh for Important Work

As Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Governors' Conference of the United States Gov. David I. Walsh has invited the Governors of all the States in the Union, together with many former Governors, to be the guests of Massachusetts August 24, 25, 26 and 27. Already a large number of acceptances have been received and the presence of a notable gathering on that occasion seems now assured.

MR. LEVERETT BENTLEY

Gov. Walsh has appointed as his secretary for the Governors' Conference Mr. Leverett D. G. Bentley of Tremont street, who is representing the Governor in preparing the program and completing the arrangements for the entertainment of the distinguished visitors.

Mr. Bentley leaves tomorrow for a trip to Wisconsin in order to confer with the officers of the conference.

Harvard Club	9
Oakley Country Club	6
Winchester	1
Worcester	0

The scores of the recent matches are as follows:

FINALS IN DOUBLES—Wales and Bray, N. C., defeated Beals and Scott, Harvard Club, 4-6; 7-5; 9-7; 1-6; 6-4.

SINGLES—FOURTH ROUND—Porter, N. C., defeated Currier, Noanett, 6-3; 6-2; Bray, N. C., defeated Beals, Harvard Club, 3-6; 6-2; 6-4; Blakemore, N. C., defeated Plimpton, N. C., 6-3; 6-4.

SEMI-FINAL ROUND—Porter, N. C., defeated Goodrich, Oakley, 6-4; 3-6; 6-4; Bray, N. C., defeated Blakemore, N. C., 6-4; 6-1.

WE AGREE WITH HIM

At the Huntington Avenue Association Carnival this week in Boston, Mr. Amos Whipple, of the Copley Plaza Square hotel made a few remarks, one sentence of which will meet with the hearty approval of many residents of this city. Mr. Whipple said, "for 20 years I have been resting the tired and feeding the hungry, but not making speeches, and it is late for me to begin now, but I do want you all to get together and pull for a new terminal, or, at least, the electrification to Newton."

THE JITNEY QUESTION

Matter of Legality of Operation to be Decided Tomorrow

The jitney question will come before the local police court tomorrow morning, having been continued from last Friday and again from Tuesday by mutual consent.

On Friday morning of last week officials and employees of the company were summoned into court when three separate charges were made against the three persons who were summoned, The Waltham Auto Bus Company, Walter S. Page, treasurer, charged with setting up and using a hackney carriage without a license; Thomas Cullen of Waltham, conductor, charged with using a hackney carriage, and James Delaney of Waltham, chauffeur, with driving a hackney carriage. In this manner three clauses of the city ordinance were covered.

LITERARY NOTES

Col. Homer B. Sprague of Vernon Court is the author of a book published by G. B. Putnam's Sons of New York, entitled "Lights and Shadows in Confederate Prisons." Col. Sprague was captured by the Confederates at the battle of Winchester and confined in the Libby prisons and also at Danville and Salisbury. His experiences are intensely interesting and told in a most artistic manner. The book also shows the failure of the strategy of Sheridan and Early at Winchester, the complete change of front made by Lincoln on the preservation of the Union, excuses the Confederates for allowing prisoners to perish for want of food, etc., and shows that the mortality of Southern prisoners was due to the refusal of the Lincoln administration to exchange prisoners. The book is published at $1.00.

"The time has come when organized women can get what they want," said a speaker at the convention of the Illinois Congress of Mothers, held in Ottawa last week. "Aldermen used to receive you as gallants and then forget you before you turned the corner. Now it is different."

TENNIS WEEK

Longwood Cricket Club Announces An Interesting Program

The Tournament for the Eastern Doubles Championship and the Twenty-fifth Annual Longwood Singles will take place on the grounds of the Longwood Cricket Club, July 26th to 31st, inclusive.

Some of those who are expected to take part in one or both events are R. N. Williams, 2d, present champion of the United States; M. C. McLoughlin of California (who defeated both Brookings and Wilding in the International Matches of 1914) and other prominent players from the Pacific Coast; Wm. J. Clothier of Philadelphia, Karl Behr, R. D. Little and H. H. Hackett of New York, all members of United States Teams in International Matches; T. R. Pell, F. C. Inman, Robert Le Roy and E. P. Larned (winner of the Longwood Challenge Cup in 1911), all of New York; R. A. Holden, Jr., and H. T. Emerson of Cincinnati; N. W. Niles, G. P. Gardner, Jr., W. M. Washburn and A. S. Dabney of former Eastern Doubles Championship Teams; H. C. Johnson and R. C. Seaver, former Champions of Massachusetts in Singles or Doubles, and many other prominent players.

The presence of so many strong players will result in interesting matches throughout the week. Matches will occur both mornings and afternoons.

CONTEST ON CHARLES RIVER

Many canoes and power boats on the Charles River were entered in a contest held Saturday at Weston Bridge, under auspices of the Auburn, Andale and Riverside Canoe Association. A dinner set, donated by a Boston company, was awarded by the judges to Jack Gaw, owner of the motor boat Marion E., as being the best equipped boat on the river.

Honorable mention was awarded H. C. Ames, one of the canoeists. The judges were the officers of the association, Harry D. Swisher, president; Lewis E. Connelly, vice-president, and R. S. Jackson, secretary.

PRICE OF GAS REDUCED FIVE CENTS

Gas Commissioners Recommend 85 Cent Gas in this City after August 1st

The board of Gas & Electric Light Commissioners which has been considering for over a year, a petition of residents of this city, for a reduction in the price for gas, made its decision this week, and recommends that after August 1st, the price to be charged for gas by the local gas company shall be 85 cents a 1000 feet, a reduction of five cents from the present price.

The opinion of the Commission is as follows:—

The territory supplied by this company includes the cities of Newton and Waltham and the towns of Watertown, Wellesley and Weston, and has a population of approximately 90,000. Prior to 1903 the company was owned locally. It supplied gas in all the municipalities named, save Waltham, and electricity in Newton and Watertown, and Waltham was supplied with both gas and electricity by the Waltham Light Co. In that year all of the capital stock of the Newton Co. was acquired in the interest of the Edison Company of Boston with a view to the purchase by the latter of its electric property. In 1909 this plan was consummated in a transaction whereby the Edison company acquired the electric properties of both the Newton and Waltham companies, and the Newton company with the $500,000 received for its electric property purchased the gas property of the Waltham company. At the same time the capital stock of the Newton company was acquired by the trustees of a voluntary association known as the "Massachusetts Gas Companies", who also own the stock of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company and the New England Gas and Coke Company, as well as certain other gas companies, and also certain trading companies engaged in producing, transporting and selling coal in the Boston market. In 1904 a contract was made for the purchase of gas from the Bay State and Massachusetts Pipe Line Gas Company.

ies (since merged in the Boston Consolidated Gas Company) for the supply of the Newton territory, and shortly after the Newton works were shut down. In 1906 the same policy was adopted as to the Waltham company. The gas purchased of the Boston company is a mixed coal and water gas. The water gas is made by that company in its own works and the coal gas is purchased of the New England Gas and Coke Company, save so far as for brief periods the Boston company has produced a part of its supply in its own works.

At the time of the consolidation the Newton and Waltham companies were both charging $1.00 a thousand cubic feet for gas. Shortly after the consolidation this price was reduced to 85 cents and the following year to 90 cents, the present price. Since this last reduction the output has increased about forty per cent. When this complaint was brought gas oil was selling at an abnormally high figure, materially increasing the cost of the water gas made by the Boston company. This factor had led to an increase in the contract price in the gas sold the Newton company. Meantime, however, the price of oil has reached nearly its old level and a corresponding decrease in the price of the gas purchased of the Boston company has followed. These facts of themselves have an important bearing upon the continuance of the present price of gas.

As already described, the same per-

EDITORIAL

The coming state primary, so far as the Republican party is concerned, promises to be as interesting as that held for many years. Besides the contest for the head of the ticket between Mr. McCall and Mr. Cushing, there is a fight for the nomination for lieutenant governor between Councillor Guy A. Ham and Senator Calvin Coghlan, and a state-wide fight for state auditor between the present incumbent, Mr. Cook, Senator Bagley of East Boston and former Senator George of Haverhill. All of the above are state wide contests. Middlesex County, where for so many years the Republican nominations have been controlled by a select few, will have several interesting fights. The most spectacular is that for the nomination for sheriff between Sheriff Fairbairn and Mr. A. B. Messer, a member of the Republican state committee from Concord, and who is certainly stirring up the political war horses, far and near. County Commissioner Chester B. Williams is also to be opposed at the primary by Mr. John L. Dyer of Cambridge, and who intends to make a strong fight in every Middlesex village and farm. There is also a strong rumor that County Treasurer Joseph O. Hayden who has held that position for thirty years will have to fight Mr. McLean of his own city of Somerville for the honor. Take it all in all, Middlesex County promises to be a veritable hotbed of politics until the primary is held.

The average voter hardly realizes the opportunity for the loss of votes which the working out of the abolition of party enrollment will entail at the coming state primary on Sept. 21. Heretofore the primary ballots have been separate pieces of paper for each of the parties entering it. The recent verdict of the voters abolishing party enrollment means that the primary ballot will now consist of one piece of paper, with one or two columns segregated for each party. The voter MUST confine his markings to but one of these parties, for if he marks for candidates in more than one party, the entire ballot is thrown out.

Too much emphasis cannot be made of this situation and the Republican city committee ought to take steps to inform every Republican voter in order that no votes shall be lost from this cause.

The Boston Transcript had an interesting article Saturday night by former Congressman Charles G. Vashburn of Worcester on possibility of the nomination of Senator John W. Weeks of this city as the Republican candidate for President. It is said that if New Englanders would abandon the habit of saying and believing that an Eastern man had no chance for this great honor, and turn about and boost for a local candidate, that the rest of the country would sit up and take notice. New England and particularly Massachusetts has a splendid opportunity to bring this nomination to Senator Weeks and should use every possible influence to bring it about.

The census figures of 42,929 giving an increase in the population of this city during the past five years of about 3000 shows that Newton is maintaining the same rate of increase as was shown between 1905 and 1910 when the increase was 2979. It is interesting to note in this connection that the estimated population on July 1, 1915, as given by our local board of health was 42,896, a remarkably close guess.

The action of the Gas Commissioners in recommending a reduction in the price of gas in this city to 85 cents will meet with the approval of the general public. There is so little difference between the service in this direction given to residents of Boston and those of Newton that it would almost seem as if the same rates paid in the larger city should be applicable here.

The editor of the GRAPHIC begins this week a series of articles intended to describe how the city of Newton is governed. The next article will cover the work done by the City Clerk and the other departments of the city will follow in order.

The business men of Newton now know that it is possible for them to get together. Let us hope that gatherings for pleasure will be soon followed by gatherings for business improvement.

Shall the Proposed Amendment to the Constitution Enabling Women to Vote be Approved and Ratified

THE COST OF JUSTICE

The assertion that equal suffrage will double the cost of elections can hardly be taken seriously, says the Boston Traveler. And it adds, cogently:

"It is not wise to make statements easily confuted by the facts. Have the costs of holding school elections in the towns of Massachusetts doubled since women were given the right to vote at such elections? The States in which women have been given the vote have not officially reported that their cost of government has been increased in any such ratio."

"The cost of maintaining the public schools is greatly increased by allowing girls as well as the boys, to attend. If the women would leave religious matters to the men and agree to stay out of the churches, we shouldn't need half as many nor such large auditoriums. The argument brought against the granting of suffrage is that it would be poor economy to send a man and a woman to do a job the man can do as well alone at once calls forth the challenge that the man cannot do the voting as well alone. If one person can vote just as well for another person, why not lessen expenses by excluding from the ballot not only all of the women, but most of the men, and let a chosen representative few vote for all? Well, that's what they used to do back in the dark ages, before the race got headed toward democracy and individual freedom, since when there has been a growing impression that every normal, enlightened, adult human being has a right to help formulate the conditions under which he or she must abide, and that regardless of the expense that may be incurred in recording his or her opinion."

Injustice always proves more costly than justice, in the long run.

A. S. B.

GUARDIANSHIP LAW FOR IDAHO

Interest in women's measures, far from being on the wane in Idaho, where women have voted since 1896, is rather than ever. This year the Legislature passed the equal guardianship law, the red light injunction and abatement law; an amendment to the mother's pension law extending it to mothers whose husbands are insane; State prohibition; an equal property rights law giving the wife the sole control of her earnings and profits from her separate estate; and a law giving a woman the right to make an holographic will, i. e., a will written and signed by herself.

The Legislature also created a commission, of which one must be a woman, one an employer of woman labor, and one a representative of labor, to investigate conditions of employment of women and children in Idaho, with especial reference to the wages received by them in the various lines of work, and report to the next Legislature with bills prepared which the commission considers necessary for carrying its recommendations into effect.

"It seemed as though there never had been a Legislature where so many bills were introduced which were of interest to women, as in the Thirtieth," says Bertha Stull Green in the New West Magazine. "As a matter of fact, however, the bills introduced were probably about the usual run, but the feminine horizon is constantly widening, and every legislative session woman finds herself interested in a greater variety of plans for the public weal."

CHINESE LEADER GLAD OF RIGHTS

Mrs. W. K. Chung founded the first Chinese private school for girls in Hong Kong ten years ago. Mrs. Chung is an authority on women, for she has been a leader in the uphill fight of Chinese women for education and other rights. She is an ardent suffragist, and two years ago she voted for the members of the famous Assembly which included ten women. This assembly led the suffragists to coin the phrase "catching up with China."

"The revolution," said Mrs. Chung, who is visiting in New York, "did much good, and it has not all been undone. There were many good laws passed—one of them a law giving women the right to control their property. Marriage laws and customs are better, too." The reactionary party, which has now the upper hand in China, closed many of the schools, suspended the Assembly, suppressed the two radical papers and punished their editors. "But in spite of the reaction," said Mrs. Chung, "we still have more rights than before the revolution. But, of course, women must go on fighting. We were side by side with the men in the revolution. We must go on working like that. We cannot leave the men to do our fighting for us."

NURSES WANT FRANCHISE

Three national bodies of women were added last week to the long lists that have come out for equal suffrage. The American Nurses' Association and its allied organizations, the National League of Nursing Education and the National Organization for Public Health Nursing, adopted resolutions for votes for women at their convention in San Francisco, June 26.

The action of the nurses is significant. Women who work for public health have recognized as a body the necessity of the vote in deciding public questions and choosing public officials. Such prominent pioneers in the profession as Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton were among the first to see the need of the ballot, and the organizations in coming out for suffrage are following their ideals.

A bill enabling women to be appointed as magistrates in children's courts has been passed by both Houses of the Western Australian Legislature.

EQUAL GUARDIANSHIP IN MASSACHUSETTS

Woman suffragists all over the country are circulating a statement that the Massachusetts Anti-Suffrage Association opposed the granting of Equal Guardianship of children in Massachusetts.

That Association has never opposed either by special circulation of literature or before any special committee was legislative bill concerning equal guardianship of children.

The Anti-Suffrage Association in 1892 in answer to many demands, issued a pamphlet on the equal custody of children, but it was neither written, published, or circulated in opposition to a bill for the equal custody of children.

This leaflet was an abstract statement of the law then in force, and its working. It was issued because the suffragists were continually citing the law then in force as an example of the injustice and subjection under which women suffered in the state of Massachusetts. In point of fact, the practice of the courts for years had been to interpret the existing law in such a way as always to give the mother the custody of her children if she was a fit person and could show that she was able to provide for them. Chief Justice Field gave his opinion that there was probably not one case on record for the twenty years preceding where a mother had failed to receive the custody of the child if she met these requirements of fitness and pecuniary responsibilities.

The present operation of the Equal Guardianship law is no different from the practice of the Massachusetts Courts before the law was passed. Only last year when one of the prominent suffrage leaders of New York was sued for a divorce, the courts gave the custody of the three minor children to the father as a more fitting person than the mother to have charge of them, although New York has had an Equal Guardianship law since 1893.

Suffragists reiterate that because they lacked the ballot, Massachusetts women had to work 45 years to gain the Equal Guardianship law, which was passed in 1902. No legislation of this sort was proposed in 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899 or 1900. In 1902 the Anti-Suffrage Association had appealed to the Boston Bar Association asking them to frame a law making father and mother guardians of children and this matter was under consideration when the Massachusetts legislature passed such a law. At that time only 7 other states had a similar law: New York (1893), Pennsylvania (1895), Kansas, Maine, Nebraska, Rhode Island and Colorado, only one of which was a suffrage state. Wyoming has had suffrage for 45 years without passing an Equal Guardianship law.

Suffragists also state that in Colorado an Equal Guardianship law was passed the very next year after women got the vote. They neglect to state, however, that the Colorado law was not the result of woman suffrage in that state, but was placed on the statute books through the efforts of a Buffalo woman, then a resident of Colorado, who before she undertook the work for equal guardianship in Colorado, returned to Buffalo and consulted with Mrs. George W. Townsend of that city, who had succeeded in securing an equal guardianship law in New York the year before, and who was able to advise her what lines to pursue.

Mrs. Townsend was the active head of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union of Buffalo and one of the most public spirited women of the state. Mrs. Townsend wrote regarding the matter: "Knowing that the woman suffragists had been working for long years to secure equal guardianship, our Union was especially careful that the Suffrage Association should not know of the Union's effort until after the law was passed. I remember that Miss Anthony called to see me as soon as she heard of it, and said, 'How did you accomplish this great good and not let us know?' And I answered, 'Because I was justified in saying that, because many men in both houses were so opposed to woman suffrage that they would not have voted for our bills. The guardianship bill was passed without a negative in either house.'"

The suffragists have also spread broadcast the statement that Massachusetts refused to pass an Equal Guardianship law until aroused by the tragic death of Mrs. Elizabeth Naramore who killed herself and her six children because her husband threatened to give the children away, which he could do owing to the lack of an Equal Guardianship law. This suffrage statement is typical in its inaccuracy. In the first place, Mrs. Naramore is not dead. In the second place, the overseer of the Poor who had charge of the Naramore case for its do Poor Farm and providing for its dependents at Holden; I told her that she together with her children might remain indefinitely at the Holden Poor Farm at the expense of the Town of Templeton until she was in a position to provide for them and herself.

His affidavit dated June 25, 1915, is here given:

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: That I, the undersigned, being duly sworn, hereby certify as follows:

That in March 1901, while acting as Overseer of the Poor in the Town of Templeton, County of Worcester, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I visited, in my official capacity, Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Naramore at her residence in the Town of Barre, Massachusetts.

That my reason for calling on Mrs. Naramore was because as a former resident of the Town of Templeton she made claim for charitable aid and assistance for her self and her six children.

That I informed her that the Town of Templeton would gladly board her and her children at the Poor Farm of the Town of Holden, Templeton having no Poor Farm and providing for its dependents at Holden; I told her that she together with her children might remain indefinitely at the Holden Poor Farm at the expense of the Town of Templeton until she was in a position to provide for them and herself.

That upon this visit I found Mrs. Naramore in what appeared to me to be a very despondent and melancholy state of mind, although I had no reason to suppose at the time she was insane. That there never was any question that Mrs. Naramore was to be separated from her children or that her children were to be taken from her by any authority whatsoever.

That any assertion that these children should be separated from their mother is absolutely and unqualifiedly false.

That if she ever gave to any person whomsoever as a reason for having murdered her children that she had feared that they would be taken from her, such statement was made without reason, and without cause.

(Signed) CHARLES H. LEATHE, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, County of Worcester.

Then personally appeared before me the above named Charles H. Leathe and made oath that the foregoing statements by him subscribed are true.

(Signed) JOSEPH P. CARNEY, Notary Public.

(SEAL)

This thoroughly disposes of the statements of the suffragists. Mrs. Naramore was tried for the murder of her children and a verdict of Not Guilty by reason of insanity was returned by the jury. She was sentenced on May 24, 1901 to the Worcester Insane Asylum for the remainder of her natural life. On Nov. 26, 1906 she was pardoned, Curtis Guild, Jr. being then Governor. That these events have not the slightest connection with equal guardianship laws must be apparent to any intelligent person.

NODEN-ROGGE

The marriage of Mr. David Garfield Noden of Nonantum place, Newton and Miss Elizabeth W. Rogge, the daughter of Mrs. Clara H. Rogge of Medford took place on Wednesday evening at the home of the bride on Liberty street in that city and the house was attractively decorated with ferns palms and cut flowers in honor of the occasion. The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock by Rev. H. Birkner, pastor of the Zion Lutheran Church of Boston, the wedding march being played by Mr. Carl Pawlowski of the Conservatory of Music.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine, trimmed with cream satin and duchess lace and wore the conventional veil and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her sister Miss Bertha E. Rogge was bridesmaid and wore a white embroidered robe, trimmed with light blue chiffon taffeta and carried a spray bouquet of sweet peas. Another sister, Frieda Rogge was the flower girl. Mr. Harold R. Noden of Newton, brother of the groom was the best man and the ushers were Messrs. Arthur Rogge of Medford, Richard Peakes of Roslindale, Herman Schoeber of Cambridge and Carl Virchow of Waverley. A reception followed the ceremony until ten o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Noden being assisted in receiving by Mrs. C. H. Rogge and Mr. and Mrs. George S. Noden. After a wedding trip to the coast of Maine, Mr. and Mrs. Noden will reside at 85 Dexter avenue, Waverley, where they will be at home after Sept. 1st.

BASE BALL LEAGUE

Games were played last Saturday in the West Newton Ball League on Allen School Field and at the Lower Falls Playground. On Allen Field the Walnut A. C. won from the Independents, 7 to 6 while at Lower Falls the Rivertons defeated the W. N. Boys Club, 6 to 5.

Tomorrow there will be games at three o'clock on Allen School Field between the Independents and the W. N. Boys Club and at Lower Falls between the Walnut A. C. and Rivertons.

Unwittingly the Constitutional Convention of New York paid a high tribute to woman suffrage when it referred it to the committee on conservation. The conservation of the homes and children of America is one of the main reasons why women want the vote.

BOARD OF TRADE OUTING

Members of the Newton Board of Trade and guests held a most enjoyable outing yesterday afternoon at Bass Point, Nahant, over fifty being present. The affair was arranged by Mr. Harold Moore, assistant secretary of the board and he was heartily congratulated on the success of the outing, which was the first of the kind ever held by the business men of the city. The party gathered at the headquarters of the board on Centre street, Newton at two o'clock and filled thirteen automobiles, which were decorated with flags and placards. After sweltering in the hot sun for a half hour, the party got under way, with Vice-President Newcomb in the lead and the heat was soon forgotten in the breezes made by the attempts of the chauffeurs to break the speed laws, and it was a miracle that the traffic police on the parkways did not spoil the pleasure of several of the members. As it was they were unmoored, probably due to the fact that they so openly announced in large type that they were the Newton Board of Trade. The crowds at Revere Beach came in for some attention as the procession passed thru and shortly after a stop was made at the Relay House, Nahant. Here the party scattered, some to show their skill at bowling, others, with the rifle, while many simply enjoyed the cool breezes from the adjacent rocks. An appetizing dinner was served at 5.30, to which ample justice was done by everyone present.

President William J. Cozens acted as toastmaster, and Mayor Childs made a few remarks in his eloquent and artistic manner. Aldermen Arthur W. Hollis, and John W. Murphy, Secretary Willard L. Sampson and J. C. Brimblecom also spoke briefly.

The ride home was made exceedingly enjoyable by the illumination at Revere Beach.

Among those present were: William J. Cozens, Mayor Edwin O. Childs, Arthur W. Hollis, John W. Murphy, J. C. Brimblecom, W. L. Sampson, J. H. Gordon, H. W. Cotton, H. G. Spaulding, M. E. Beardsley, H. MR. TAFFE DEAD

Mr. George Taffe, the son of Police Officer Richard T. Taffe, died last Sunday night at the Newton Hospital to which he had been removed that day from his home on Waltham street, West Newton. Mr. Taffe was born in West Newton and was 27 years of age. He had been employed for some time by the Telephone Company, but he had been in poor health for some years. He was exceedingly popular and there was a large attendance at the funeral services, as well as many floral tributes. Requiem mass was held at St. Bernard's Church on Wednesday morning, Rev. Fr. Cronin, celebrant. The interment was at Calvary Cemetery, and the pall bearers were Messrs. John Taffe, John Monaghan, Ralph Lill James Ryan, Angus McNeil and Charles Mullen. Besides his father, Mr. Taffe is survived by two brothers and four sisters.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere gratitude to all my friends for their many expressions of sympathy and for their floral tributes, on account of the death of my son.

RICHARD T. TAFFE.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Another open air meeting will be held on the Y. M. C. A. lawn Sunday afternoon, July 18th, at five o'clock. More than 150 were out last Sunday. The orchestra which has played for the last few Sundays will continue to give its services. Mr. James C. Simpson of Winthrop will be the speaker. A deep sea fishing trip for men is being planned for July 22nd. Anyone wishing to go please hand in name at once to Mr. Bascom.

FIRST EPISODE

The Clutching Hand.

"There must be something new in order to catch criminals nowadays. The old methods are all right—as far as they go. But while we have been using them, criminals have kept pace with modern science."

Craig Kennedy laid down his newspaper and filled his pipe with my tobacco. In college we had roomed together, had shared everything, even poverty, and now that Craig was a professor of chemistry in charge of the laboratory at the university and I had a sort of roving commission on the staff of the Star, we had continued our arrangement.

"It has always seemed strange to me," he went on slowly, "that no one has ever endowed a professorship in criminal science in any of the large colleges."

I tossed aside my own paper and retrieved the tobacco.

"Why should there be a chair in criminal science?" I replied argumentatively, settling back in my chair. "I've done my turn at police headquarters reporting, and I can tell you, Craig, it's no place for a college professor. Crime is—just crime. And as for dealing with it the great detective is born and bred to it. College professors for the sociology of the thing—yes; for the detection of it, give me a Byrnes."

"On the contrary," persisted Kennedy, his clean-cut features betraying an earnestness which I knew indicated that he was leading up to something of importance, "there is a distinct place for science in the detection of crime. Today we have professors of everything—why not professors of crime science?"

Still, as I shook my head dubiously, he hastened to clinch his point. "Colleges have got down to solving the hard facts of life, nowadays—pretty nearly all, except one. They still treat crime in the old way, study its statistics and pore over its causes and the theories of how it can be prevented and punished. But as for running down the criminal himself, scientifically, relentlessly—bah! we haven't made enough progress to mention since the hammer and tongs method of your sainted Byrnes."

"Doubtless you will write a brochure on this most interesting subject," I suggested, "and let it go at that."

"No, I am serious," he replied, determined for some reason or other to make a convert of me. "I mean exactly what I say. I am going to apply science to the detection of crime, the same sort of methods by which we trace out the presence of a mysterious chemical or track down a deadly germ. And before I have gone far, I am going to enlist Walter Jameson as an aid. I think I shall need you in my business."

"How do I come in?" I asked.

"Well, for one thing, you will get a 'scoop,' a 'beat'—whatever you call it in that newspaper jargon of yours."

"Fortunately, Walter," he pursued, "the crime-hunters have gone ahead in science faster than the criminals. It's to be my job to catch criminals. Yours, it seems to me, is to show people how they can never hope to beat the modern scientific detective."

"Go as far as you like," I exclaimed, convinced at last.

And so it was that we formed this strange new partnership in crime science that has existed ever since.

"Jameson, here's a story I wish you'd follow up," remarked the managing editor of the Star to me one evening after I had turned in an assignment of the late afternoon.

He handed me a clipping from the evening edition of the Star, and I quickly ran my eye over the headline:

"THE CLUTCHING HAND" WINS AGAIN.

NEW YORK MYSTERIOUS MASTER CRIMINAL PERFECTS ANOTHER COUP.

City Police Completely Baffled

"Here's this murder of Fletcher, the retired banker and trustee of the university," he explained. "Not a clue—except a warning letter signed with this mysterious clutching fist. Last week it was the robbery of the Haxworth jewels and the killing of old Haxworth. Again that curious sign of the hand. Then there was the dastardly attempt on Sherburne, the steel magnate. Not a trace of the assailant except this same clutching fist. So it has gone, Jameson—the most alarming and inexplicable series of murders that has ever happened in this country. And nothing but this uncanny hand to trace them by."

The editor paused a moment, then exclaimed: "Why, this fellow seems to take a diabolical—I might almost say pathological—pleasure in crimes of violence, revenge, avarice and self-protection. Sometimes it seems as if he delights in the pure devilry of the thing. It is weird."

He leaned over and spoke in a low, tense tone. "Strangest of all, the tip has just come to us that Fletcher, Haxworth, Sherburne and all the rest of these wealthy men were insured in the Consolidated Mutual Life. Now, Jameson, I want you to find Taylor Dodge, the president, and interview him. Get what you can, at any cost."

I had naturally thought first of Kennedy, but there was no time now to call him up and, besides, I must see Dodge immediately.

Dodge, I discovered over the telephone, was not at home nor at any of the clubs to which he belonged. Late though it was I concluded that he was at his office. No amount of persuasion could get me past the door, and, though I found out later and shall tell soon what was going on there, I determined, about nine o'clock, that the best way to get at Dodge was to go to his house on Fifth avenue. If I had to camp on his front doorstep until morning. The harder I found the story to get the more I wanted it.

With some misgivings about being admitted, I rang the bell of the splendid, though not very modern, Dodge residence. An English butler, with a nose that must have been his fortune, opened the door and gravely informed me that Mr. Dodge was not at home, but was expected at any moment.

Once in, I was not going lightly to give up that advantage. I bethought myself of his daughter Elaine, one of the most popular debutantes of the season, and sent in my card to her, on a chance of interesting her and seeing her father, writing on the bottom of the card: "Would like to interview Mr. Dodge regarding Clutching Hand."

Summoning up what assurance I had, which is sometimes considerable, I followed the butler down the hall as he bore my card. As he opened the door of the drawing-room, I caught a vision of a slip of a girl in evening clothes.

Elaine Dodge was both the ingenue and the athlete—the thoroughly modern type of girl—equally at home with tennis and tango, table talk and tea.

Near her I recognized from his pictures Harry Bennett, the rising young corporation lawyer, a mighty good-looking fellow, with an affable, pleasing way about him, perhaps thirty-five years old or so, but already prominent and quite friendly with Dodge.

"Who is it, Jennings?" she asked.

"A reporter, Miss Dodge," answered the butler, glancing superciliously back at me. "And you know how your father dislikes to see anyone here at the house," he added deferentially to her.

"Miss Dodge," I pleaded, bowing as if I had known them all my life, "I've been trying to find your father all the evening. It's very important."

She looked up at me surprised and in doubt whether to laugh or stamp her pretty little foot in indignation at my stupendous nerve.

She laughed. "You are a very brave young man," she rippled with a roguish look at Bennett's discomfiture over the interruption of the tete-a-tete.

There was a note of seriousness in it, too, that made me ask quickly, "Why?"

The smile flitted from her face, and in its place came a frank earnest expression, which I later learned to like and respect very much. "My father has declared he will eat the very next reporter who tries to interview him here," she answered.

I was about to prolong the waiting time by some jolly about such a stunning girl not having by any possibility such a cannibal of a parent, when the rattle of the changing gears of a car outside told of the approach of a limousine.

The big front door opened and Elaine flung herself in the arms of an elderly, stern-faced, gray-haired man. "Why, dad," she cried, "where have you been? I missed you so much at dinner. I'll be so glad when this terrible business gets cleared up. Tell me. What is on your mind? What is it that worries you now?"

I noticed then that Dodge seemed wrought up and a bit unnerved, for he sank rather heavily into a chair, brushed his face with his handkerchief and breathed heavily. Elaine hovered over him solicitously, repeating her question.

With a mighty effort he seemed to get himself together. He rose and turned to Bennett.

"Harry," he exclaimed, "I've got the Clutching Hand!"

The two men stared at each other.

"Yes," continued Dodge, "I've found out how to trace it, and tomorrow I am going to set the alarms of the city at rest by exposing—"

Just then Dodge caught sight of me. For the moment I thought perhaps he was going to fulfill his threat.

"Who the devil—why didn't you tell me a reporter was here, Jennings?" he puttered indignantly, pointing toward the door.

Argument, entreaty, were of no avail. There was nothing to do but go. At least, I reflected, I had the greater part of the story—all except the one big thing, however—the name of the criminal. But Dodge would know him tomorrow!

I hurried back to the Star to write my story in time to catch the last morning edition.

Meanwhile, if I may anticipate my story, I must tell of what we later learned had happened to Dodge so completely to upset him.

Ever since the Consolidated Mutual had been hit by the murders he had had many lines out in the hope of enmeshing the perpetrator. That night, as I found out the next day, he had at last heard of a clue. One of the company's detectives had brought in a red-headed, lame, partly paralyzed crook, who enjoyed the expressive moniker of "Limpy Red."

Limpy Red was a gunman of some renown, evil-faced and, having nothing much to lose, desperate. Whoever the master criminal of the clutching hand might have been he had seen fit to employ Limpy, who had not taken the precaution of getting rid of him soon enough when he was through.

Therefore Limpy had a grievance, and now descended under pressure to the low level of snitching to Dodge in his office.

"No, governor," the trembling wretch had said as he handed over a grimy envelope. "I ain't never seen his face—but here is directions how to find his hangout."

As Limpy ambled out, he turned to Dodge, quivering at the enormity of his

"Don't Let On How You Found Out!"

unpardonable sin in gangland: "For God's sake, governor," he implored, "don't let on how you found out!"

And yet Limpy Red had scarcely left with his promise not to tell, when Dodge, happening to turn over some papers, came upon an envelope left on his own desk, bearing that mysterious clutching hand!

He tore it open, and read in amazement:

"Destroy Limpy Red's Instructions within the next hour."

Dodge gazed about in wonder. This was getting on his nerves. He determined to go home and rest.

Outside the house, as he left his car, pasted over the monogram on the door, he had found another note, with the same weird mark and the single word: "Remember!"

In spite of the pleadings of young Bennett, Dodge refused to take warning. In the safe in his beautifully fitted library he deposited Limpy's document in an envelope containing all the correspondence that had led up to the final step in the discovery.

It was late in the evening when I returned to our apartment, and not finding Kennedy there, knew that I would discover him at the laboratory.

"Craig," I cried as I burst in on him. "I've got a case for you—greater than any ever before."

Kennedy looked up calmly from the rack of scientific instruments that surrounded him—text tubes, beakers, carefully labeled bottles.

"Indeed?" he remarked, coolly going back to his work.

"Yes," I cried. "It is a scientific criminal who seems to leave no clues."

Kennedy looked up gravely. "Every criminal leaves a trace," he said quietly. "If it hasn't been found, then it must be because no one has ever looked for it in the right way."

Still gazing at me keenly, he added: "Yes, I already knew there was such a man at large. I have been called in on that Fletcher case—he was a trustee of the university, you know."

"All right," I exclaimed, a little nettled that he should have anticipated me even so much in the case. "But you haven't heard the latest."

"What is it?" he asked with provocative calmness.

"Taylor Dodge," I blurted out, "has the clue. Tomorrow he will track down the man!"

Kennedy fairly jumped as I repeated the news.

"How long has he known?" he demanded eagerly.

"Perhaps three or four hours," I hazarded.

Kennedy gazed at me fixedly.

"Then Taylor Dodge is dead!" he exclaimed, throwing off his acid-stained laboratory jacket, and hurrying into his street clothes.

"Impossible!" I ejaculated.

Kennedy paid no attention to the objection. "Come, Walter," he urged. "We must hurry before the trail gets cold."

There was something positively uncanny about Kennedy's assurance. I doubted—yet I feared.

It was well past the middle of the night when we pulled up in a night-hawk taxicab before the Dodge house, mounted the steps and rang the bell.

Jennings answered sleepily, but not so much so that he did not recognize me. He was about to bang the door shut when Kennedy interposed his foot.

"Where is Mr. Dodge?" asked Kennedy. "Is he all right?"

"Of course he is—in bed," replied the butler.

Just then we heard a faint cry, like nothing exactly human. Or was it our heightened imaginations, under the spell of the darkness?

"Listen!" cautioned Kennedy.

We did, standing there now in the hall. Kennedy was the only one of us who was cool. Jennings' face blanched then he turned tremblingly and went down to the library door, whence the sounds had seemed to come.

He called, but there was no answer. He turned the knob and opened the door. The Dodge library was a large room. In the center stood a big, flat-topped desk of heavy mahogany. It was brilliantly lighted.

At one end of the desk was a telephone. Taylor Dodge was lying on the floor at that end of the desk—perfectly rigid—his face distorted—a ghastly figure. A pet dog ran over, sniffed frantically at his master's legs and suddenly began to howl dismally.

Dodge was dead!

"Help!" shouted Jennings.

Others of the servants came rushing in. There was, for the moment, the greatest excitement and confusion.

Suddenly a wild figure in flying garments flitted down the stairs and into the library, dropping beside the dead man, without seeming to notice us at all.

"Father!" shrieked a woman's voice, heart-broken. "Father! Oh—my God—he—he is dead!"

It was Elaine Dodge.

With a mighty effort, the heroic girl seemed to pull herself together.

"Jennings," she cried, "call Mr. Bennett—immediately!"

From the one-sided, excited conversation of the butler over the telephone, I gathered that Bennett had been in the process of disrobing in his own apartment uptown, and would be right down.

Together, Kennedy, Elaine and myself lifted Dodge to a sofa and Elaine's aunt, Josephine, with whom she lived, appeared on the scene, trying to quiet the sobbing girl.

Kennedy and I withdrew a little way, and he looked about curiously.

"What was it?" I whispered. "Was it natural, an accident, or—murder?" The word seemed to stick in my throat. If it was a murder, what was the motive? Could it have been to get the evidence which Dodge had that would incriminate the master criminal?

Kennedy moved over quietly and examined the body of Dodge. When he rose his face had a peculiar look.

"Terrible!" he whispered to me. "Apparently he had been working at his accustomed place at the desk when the telephone rang. He rose and crossed over to it. See! That brought his feet on this register left into the floor. As he took the telephone receiver down a flash of light must have shot from it to his ear. It shows the characteristic electric burn."

"The motive?" I queried.

"Evidently his pockets had been gone through, though none of the valuables were missing. Things on his desk show that a hasty search has been made."

Just then the door opened and Bennett burst in.

As he stood over the body, gazing down at it, repressing the emotions of a strong man, he turned to Elaine, and in a low voice exclaimed: "The Clutching Hand did this. I shall consecrate my life to bring this man to justice!"

He spoke tensely, and Elaine, looking up into his face, as if imploring his help in her hour of need, unable to speak, merely grasped his hand.

Kennedy, who, in the meantime, had stood apart from the rest of us, was examining the telephone carefully.

"A clever crook," I heard him mutter between his teeth. "He must have worn gloves. Not a finger print—at least here."

Perhaps I can do no better than to reconstruct the crime as Kennedy later placed these startling events together.

Long after I had left and even after Bennett left, Dodge continued working in his library, for he was known as a prodigious worker.

Had he taken the trouble, however,

to pause and peer out into the moonlight that flooded the back of his house, he might have seen the figures of two stealthy crooks crouching in the half shadows of one of the cellar windows, one crook, at least, masked.

The masked crook held in his hands carefully the ends of two wires attached to an electric feed, and, sending his pal to keep watch outside, he entered the cellar of the Dodge house through a window, whose pane he had carefully removed. As he came through the window he dragged the wires with him, and, after a moment's recumbent, attached them to the furnace pipe of the old-fashioned hot-air heater, where the pipe ran up through the floor to the library above.

The other wire was quickly attached to the telephone where its wires entered.

Upstairs Dodge, evidently uneasy in his mind about the precious Limpy Red letter, took it from the safe along with most of the other correspondence and, pressing a hidden spring in the wall, opened a secret panel and placed most of the important documents in this hiding place.

Downstairs the masked master criminal had already attached a voltmeter to the wires he had installed, waiting.

Just then could be heard the tinkle of Dodge's telephone, and the old man rose to answer it. As he did so he placed his foot on the iron register, his hand taking the telephone and the receiver. At that instant came a powerful electric flash. Dodge sank on the floor, clutching the instrument, electrocuted.

A moment later the criminal slid silently into Dodge's room. Carefully putting on rubber gloves and avoiding

Limpy had long since reached the point of saturation and lurching forth from his new found cronies he sought other fields of excitement. Likewise did the newcomer, who bore a strange resemblance to the lookout who had been stationed outside at the Dodge house a scant half hour before.

What happened later was only a matter of seconds—and waiting until the hated snitch—for gangdom hates the informer worse than anything else dead or alive—had turned a sufficiently dark and deserted corner.

A muffled thud, a stifled groan followed as a heavy section of lead pipe wrapped in a newspaper descended on the crass skull of Limpy.

It was the vengeance of the Clutching Hand—swift, sure, remorseless.

And yet it had not been a night of complete success for the master criminal, as anyone might have seen who could have followed his sinuous route to a place of greater safety. Unable to wait longer, he pulled the papers he had taken from the safe from his pocket. His chagrin at finding most of them to be blank found only one expression of felled fury—that menacing clutching hand—the real one!

Kennedy had turned from his futile examination for marks on the telephone. There stood the safe, a moderate sized strong box, but of a modern type. He tried the door. It was locked. There was not a mark on it. The combination had not been tampered with. Nor had there been any attempt to "soup" the safe.

With a quick motion he felt in his pocket as if looking for gloves. Finding none, he glanced about and seized two pieces of paper from the desk.

The Criminal Slid Silently Into Dodge's Room.

touching the register, he wrenched the telephone from the grasp of the dead man, replacing it in its normal position. Only for a second did he pause to look at his victim as he destroyed the evidence of his work.

Minutes were precious. First Dodge's pockets, then his desk engaged his attention. There was left the safe.

As he approached the strong box, the master criminal took two vials from his pocket. Removing a bust of Webster that stood on the safe, he poured the contents of the vials in two mixed masses of powder, forming a heap on the safe, into which he inserted two magnesium wires.

He lighted them, sprang back, hiding his eyes from the light, and a blinding gust of flame, lasting perhaps ten seconds, poured out from the top of the safe.

It was not an explosion, but just a dazzling, intense flame that sizzled and crackled. It seemed impossible, but the glowing mass was literally sinking, sinking down into the cold, steel. At last it burned through—as if the safe had been of tinder!

Without waiting a moment longer than necessary, the masked criminal advanced again and actually put his hands down through the top of the safe, pulling out a bunch of papers. Quickly he thrust them all, with just a glance, into his pocket.

Still working quickly, he took the bust of the great orator, which he had removed, and placed it under the light. Next, from his pocket he drew two curious stencils, as it were, which he had apparently carefully prepared. With his hands, still carefully gloved, he rubbed the stencils on his hair, as if to cover them with a film of natural oils. Then he deliberately pressed them over the statue in several places. It was a peculiar action, and he seemed to fairly gloat over it when it was done and the bust returned to its place, covering the hole.

As noiselessly as he had come, he made his exit after one last malignant look at Dodge. It was now but the work of a moment to remove the wires he had placed and climb out of the window, taking them and destroying the evidence down in the cellar.

A low whistle from the masked crook, now again in the shadow, brought his pal stealthily to his side.

"It's all right," he whispered hoarsely to the man. "Now you attend to Limpy Red."

The villainous looking pal nodded and, without another word, the two made their getaway, safely, in opposite directions.

When Limpy Red, still trembling, left the office of Dodge earlier in the evening, he had repaired as fast as his shambling feet would take him to his favorite dive up on Park Row.

Had the Bowery "sinkers" not got into his eyes he might have noticed among the late revelers a man who spoke to no one, but took his place near by at the bar.

With them, in order not to confuse any possible finger prints on the bust, he lifted it off.

I gave a gasp of surprise.

There, in the top of the safe, yawned a gaping hole, through which one could have thrust his arm!

"What is it?" we asked, crowding about him.

"Thermit," he replied laconically.

"Thermit?" I repeated.

"Yes—a compound of iron oxide and powdered aluminum, invented by a chemist at Essen, Germany. It gives a temperature of over five thousand degrees. It will eat its way through the strongest steel."

Jennings, his mouth wide open with wonder, advanced to take the bust from Kennedy.

"No—don't touch it," he waved him off, laying the bust on the desk. "I want no one to touch it—don't you see how careful I was to use no question about any clue this fellow may have left on the marble?"

As he spoke, Craig was dusting over the surface of the bust with some black powder.

"Look!" exclaimed Craig suddenly. "Finger prints!" I cried excitedly. "Yes," nodded Kennedy, studying them closely. "A clue—perhaps."

"What—those little marks—a clue?" asked a voice behind us.

I turned and saw Elaine looking over our shoulders, fascinated. It was evidently the first time she had realized that Kennedy was in the room.

"How can you tell anything by that?" she asked.

"Why, easily," he answered, picking up a glass paper weight which lay on the desk. "You see, I place my finger on this weight—so. You could see it even without the powder on this glass. Do you see those lines? There are various types of markings—four general types—and each person's markings are different, even if of the same general type—loop, whorl, arch or composite."

He continued working as he talked. "Your thumb marks, for example, Miss Dodge, are different from mine. Mr. Jameson's are different from both of us. And this fellow's finger prints are still different. It is mathematically impossible to find two alike in every respect."

Kennedy was holding the paper weight near the bust as he talked. "I shall never forget the look of blank amazement on his face as he bent over closer."

"My God!" he exclaimed excitedly, "this fellow is a master criminal! He has made stencils or something of the sort on which, by some mechanical process, he has actually forged the hitherto infallible finger prints!"

I, too, bent over and studied the marks on the bust and those Kennedy had made on the paper weight to show Elaine.

THE FINGER PRINTS ON THE BUST WERE KENNEDY'S OWN.

A Stagecoach Wedding

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

I was standing in a room crowded with men and women in evening dress when I heard a cheery feminine voice near me exclaim:

"Why, Tom?"

"What luck?" responded a young man, with blond hair, parted in the middle, and his chin held up by a very high collar.

"I don't know a person here," said the girl, who had spoken first.

"Nor I. I would rather have met you than own a gold mine."

"Isn't it nice to meet some one you don't expect, but whom you wish to meet?"

NEWTON UPPER FALLS FIELD DAY

Last Saturday afternoon and evening the Field Day of the Newton Upper Falls Athletic Association, which was postponed July 5 on account of the inclement weather, was held on the Upper Falls Playground. The attraction for the afternoon was a baseball game between the Upper Falls A. A. and the Columbus of Brighton, which resulted in a victory for the home team after ten innings by a score of 3 to 2.

The game was very close and kept the hundreds of spectators who witnessed it constantly on edge. Following the ball game the athletic sports were conducted with the following winners: two-mile run, won by John Bell, Ralph Patrick, second; one hundred yard dash, won by Brownville, Watten, second; Buckley, third; fifty-yard dash for girls, first heat won by Helen Crowley, Louise Duke, second, Catherine Conlon third; second heat won by Miss Haley, Miss Webb second, Lillian Crowley third. Final won by Louise Duke, Helen Crowley second, Miss Webb third. Running high jump won by Smith, height 5 ft. 7 in. Braley and Watten tied for second at 5 ft. 5 in. Dancing and an excellent display of fireworks closed the day. The various booths, which were devoted to entertainments and refreshments were besieged during the day and the entire day will go down as one of the most successful affairs ever held in Upper Falls, fully five thousand people attended.

NORUMBEGA PARK

As the season advances this delightful resort on the banks of the beautiful Charles River, becomes the mecca of thousands of pleasure seekers. For a safe and sane outing, Norumbega offers the best opportunity of any spot in Greater Boston.

Sunday night, another big feature picture of the great European War is to be shown. This was, recently presented in the Penn Garden Theatre, Washington, D. C., and among the distinguished guests of the theatre on the first day, were President Wilson, members of his cabinet, the diplomatic corps, officials of the army and navy, and the Press Club. Beginning Monday, July 19th, the summer delightful concoction of humor and song "Little Coquette" will be the attraction.

Deadheads.

Exactly how our language came into possession of the word "deadhead," which is so frequently used in connection with the transportation business, is not known. Of the many versions of its origin which are current the following whether correct or not, is at least the most interesting:

Many years ago the principal avenue of a town passed close to the entrance of a toll road leading to a cemetery. As this cemetery had been laid out some time previous to the construction of the road, it was arranged that all funeral processions should be allowed to pass along the road free of toll. One day, as a well known physician who was driving along this road stopped to pay his toll, he observed to the keeper, "Considering the benevolent character of our profession, I think you ought to let us pass free of charge."

"No, no, doctor," said the gatekeeper, "we can't afford that. You send too many deadheads through as it is."

The story traveled around the country, and in this way the word "deadhead," eventually came to be applied to those who obtain free transportation from railway and steamship lines.—New York American.

Insects That Carry Diseases.

Sir Donald Ross, who discovered how the anopheles or mottled winged mosquito carries malaria, gave in a lecture an account of other diseases that are carried by insects or bugs. Mosquitoes carry not only malaria, but yellow fever, dengue fever and elephantiasis. Glossina moritans is the carrying agent of the tropical disease known as mangua, while tsetse flies are the cause of sleeping sickness.

The spirochaetes of tick fever are borne by ticks, and a mild fever is conveyed by sand flies. Plague is due to the rat flea, which carries the parasites in the salivary glands and leaves them in the flesh of whomsoever it bites. Mediterranean fever is carried principally by the milk of infected goats. Leprosy has been attributed to bedbugs, and some are even beginning to think that measles is due to fleas.—London Opinion.

A Gladstone Anecdote.

Lord Alverstone tells this anecdote of Gladstone in his "Recollections":

"Mr. Gladstone was very much interested in the Caucasus. I had a friend, Captain X., who had recently come home from that district, and I gave him a letter of introduction to Mr. Gladstone. A few days later I met Mr. Gladstone in Parliament street. He stopped me and said, 'Your friend, Captain X., knows more about the Caucasus than any man I ever met.' A few minutes afterward I met Captain X. in Pall Mall. I said to him, 'Well, you have made a great impression on Mr. Gladstone.' 'Have I?' he said. 'Yes,' I replied. 'He says you know more about the Caucasus than any man he ever met.' 'Well,' said Captain X., 'that is very strange, for, though I was with him for three observations.'"

Fine Encouragement.

Willie was of an economical turn of mind. He called upon Elizabeth many times before he bought her a box of candy. At last he loosened up and bought an eighty cent pound box.

"That evening his brother noticed that he had a grudge on and asked the trouble."

"That blamed old cur ate half of that box of eighty cent candy," he said, referring to Elizabeth's Scotch collie.

"The next time he bought candy he bought, in addition to another eighty cent pound box, a bag of ten cent store candy for the dog."

"Oh, William!" said Elizabeth. "How thoughtful of you! I am so glad that you and I have become friends!" —New York Globe.

Family Pride.

Mrs. Blunt—Well, Louisa, I don't suppose you will attempt to deny that your original ancestors were stone age ruffians who lived in a damp cave.

Mrs. Tree—If my earliest ancestor were a part of the geologic period of which you speak they must have had a red sandstone chateau of their own on Flinthed Avenue, with stalcite decorations and running water on the first floor!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Critic.

"There is plenty of gas in the thing, but I'm hanged if I can see any meter!" replied the heartless editor.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

White House Coffee

The Encyclopedia Britannica speaks of coffee as an "Important and valuable ARTICLE OF FOOD used since 875 A.D." Also, "Coffee is exhilarating, lightens the sense of fatigue, and SUSTAINS strength under prolonged and severe exertion."
What better tribute could be paid to coffee than the above from this world-famous authority?
It describes White House Coffee to the letter. We would only add that "White House" has a flavor never approached by any other Coffee; its dependable quality and excellence is secured by expert blending of selections from the Mountain Districts of the Coffee World whence come the sweetest Coffees, and the White House Brand is prepared for market and delivered to you just as we pack it in a thoroughly up-to-date coffee establishment, where all the weighing and handling is done by automatic machinery, in rooms continuously supplied with fresh air and flooded with sunlight.
1, 2 and 3-lb. sea of cans only. Never in bulk. All leading grocers.
If you have not tried "White House," you have missed one of the joys of living.

TREMONT THEATRE—Shows may come and shows may go, feature films be widely heralded and after brief exhibitions returned to the shelves, but "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, continues on its triumphant way. The fifteenth week of the attraction is now in progress.
It is marked by the putting on of an entirely new print just received from Los Angeles. The entertainment is substantially as before, yet many artistic improvements are evident through the skilful tinting that has been done, notably the coloring of the Ku Klux Klan scenes. For out of town patrons the matinee performances will be found attractive the same as night and more convenient to attend. The spectacle is being performed twice daily at 2:10 and 8:10 P. M. respectively.

DEATH OF MRS. RODDEN

Mrs. Helen Logan Rodden, widow of the late Samuel Rodden of Brookline, passed away Saturday, July 10th, following an illness of about three days.

The deceased was born in Biel, Haddingtonshire, Scotland, but had passed the greater part of her life in Boston. She is survived by one son,
Mr. Thomas L. Rodden and two daughters, Miss Helen M. Rodden and Miss Henrietta L. Rodden of Newton.

The funeral took place Monday afternoon at her late residence, 11 Carleton street. Impressive services were conducted at 2 o'clock by Rev. Robert Rae, pastor of the North Congregational Church. Many beautiful floral tributes testified to the esteem in which she was held by her many friends, among them being a design from the employees of the Newton Post Office.
The burial was in the family lot in Walnut Hill Cemetery, Brookline.

Street Department, the board must take action if any of the abutters refuse to sign the usual agreement to pay one half the cost, amounting to about 21 cents a running foot of frontage. In such cases the abutters are given a hearing before the board takes final action. In the case of sewers as well as sidewalks, the board subsequently orders the betterments assessed against the properties benefited and such assessments become a part of the lien for taxes on the property affected.

Street sprinkling is a misnomer and a relic of previous years, when the watering cart was a prominent feature on our streets. Beginning with the time when the residents of certain streets clubbed together and hired a private contractor to water their street, the subject of street sprinkling, has, like Topsy, just "growned" without much consideration, and certainly without systematic adjustment. The private contractor was later succeeded by the city, which watered the street and assessed the cost on each abutter, the assessments being paid with more or less grumbling, depending on whether or not, the man on the cart knew his business. More recently, the substitution of oil and tarvia, as a preventative for dust, created entirely new conditions, and the Legislature authorized a continuation of the assessments plan for sprinkling streets with oil. It is now known that the use of oil and tarvia is a preservative of the street surface as well as a dust layer, and it is an open question whether it is fair to charge the abutters on about ninety miles of streets which are now "sprinkled" the assessment of three cents a front foot while the abutters on other streets, repaired in a similar fashion from the Street Maintenance fund, are not so assessed. It would seem to be time for the street "sprinkling" custom to be abolished and the entire cost for dust laying as well as preserving the street surface, done at the expense of the entire city instead of at the expense of only a portion of the tax payers.

For many years it was the policy of the city to require land owners developing new properties to build new streets according to certain specifications, before they would be accepted as public streets. This entailed no cost on the city and worked fairly well. In some cases where private streets had been partially built upon it was found impossible for all the abutters to agree, and the city was asked to do the work under the betterment act and to assess the cost on the abutters. This required an appropriation for the work to be made by the city government, and the possibility of a lawsuit or other legal complication over the matter of assessments. During the past few years, the city has acted more frequently under the betterment act and has gradually worked out a policy of requiring the signatures of at least 75% of the abutters to release all claims for damages and to agree to accept the assessments to be levied for the work, when completed. This policy reduces to a minimum the possibility of loss on account of protest against assessments and is apparently working for the best interests of all concerned.

Water mains are usually laid as a routine matter on petition of the land owner who must guarantee to pay for five years, an amount equal to 5% on the cost of laying that particular main. During this period any water rates paid by other persons on this main is credited to the guarantee.

The Finance Committee has the important work of co-ordinating all the expenses of the city to the ability of the tax payers, as well as limiting the tax rate to an amount which will make this city an attractive place of residence for wealthy and otherwise desirable class of citizens.

The most important business of this committee comes in the spring, when the annual budget amounting to over a million and a half of dollars is under consideration. The Municipal Finance law of 1913 made a radical change in the procedure of making this budget and considerably curtailed the jurisdiction of the board of aldermen. The mayor now submits a budget within 60 days of his inauguration, and the figures so submitted cannot be increased, new items cannot be added and the only function of the board is to reduce the amounts, or to refuse to pass them entirely. Where harmony exists between the aldermen and the mayor, this law will suffice, but where there is friction, the possibilities for trouble are numerous. It is true that the board can request the mayor to submit a certain item for consideration, and in the event of his refusing to do so, may, after seven days, adopt such an item by a two-thirds vote, but this course is a clumsy method of conducting city business.

The Finance committee usually considers the budget by giving a hearing to each department head on the appropriations for his department. These hearings usually take considerable time and the committee holds many midnight sessions. The school appropriation for some years has been the subject of the most debate and has at last been provisionally settled by a gentlemen's agreement to the effect that the percent of increase in the appropriation for the next few years shall be in accordance with the increase in school attendance. The next important item in the budget is that for the Street Department, and it is here that the greatest cut is usually made and it is for this reason, that our streets have gradually deteriorated. An attempt was made two years ago to work out a gentlemen's agreement as to the manner in which the street appropriations were to be utilized, but it has only been partially carried out, a change in mayors as well as in street commissioners being in some measure responsible for the situation.

The question of salaries is also one of the problems of this committee and often spends more time on a $100 increase of salary of a stenographer than is required on other items involving thousands of dollars. With the passage of the budget, the duties of the committee are by no means concluded. Our city charter has a peculiar provision that no money can be expended from the budget without a "grant" being made by the board. This provision was originally a part of our former custom of making the budget in the fall of the preceding year, and while the Municipal Finance law repealed that part of our charter it did not affect the "grant" requirement. It is now customary for the committee and board to make a grant at the beginning of the year of all salaries and other fixed charges and then once a month, make provision for the running expenses of the city and the various departments are thereby required to make their appropriations last the entire year.

The committee also approves any recommendation from the other committees requiring the expenditure of money, recommends when it is necessary to issue bonds for sewers or other public improvements, and in general has jurisdiction over the financial business of the city.

The committee on Claims and Rules considers every claim made against the city, most of them being for accidents caused by defects in the streets or sidewalks, and if liability on the part of the city is evident, endeavors to effect a settlement. If no liability can be proven, the legal lights of the board assert, that it is impossible to settle even what may be considered a moral claim. The claims for workmen's compensation are becoming an important item in the cost of the city, an appropriation of $2000 being necessary for the present year. The minor claims of this nature are settled directly by the city solicitor, but those involving any considerable expenditure come before the committee and the board for action. This committee also considers and prepares the ordinances and regulations of the city, the recent important ordinance fixing sick pay and vacations and the regulations intended to cover the use of firemen being the work of this committee.

The committee on Schools is practically a sub-committee of the Finance committee and does preliminary work on the school budget.

The committee on Kenrick Fund arranges for the distribution of the income of a fund of some $4000, a bequest made nearly 100 years ago by John Kenrick, and the income of which is distributed among the "needy industrious poor" of the city.

The committee on Mayor's Address generally looks over the recommendations made at the beginning of the year by the mayor and refers them to the proper committees for further consideration.

The high standard of city government which has been the proud boast of Newton for many years, is largely due to the faithful attention given to the committee work by members of our board of aldermen, and our citizens should realize the valuable service which is being given them, day by day and week by week by these gentlemen, who thru a sense of public duty, are devoting their time and their energy to the public weal.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIP

A Scholarship of the value of $300 ($1500 per annum, tenable at the University of Oxford, England, for a period of three years, beginning from October, 1916, will be open for competition in the State of Massachusetts at the close of the present year. Similar Scholarships will be awarded for the years 1917, 1918, and 1919.

Competitors must be citizens of the United States, between 19 and 25 years of age, and must, before the date of entry on residence at Oxford, have completed at least their second year at some regular degree-granting American University or College. Candidates having their domicile in the State and those who have received a large part of their education there are alike eligible.

The Qualifying Examination will be held on Tuesday, the 5th, and Wednesday, the 6th of October, 1915. A State Committee of Selection chooses the Scholar from among those who have passed this Examination. Application should be made to the Chairman of this Committee, President A. Lawrence Lowell, LL.D., Harvard University.

A Memorandum giving further particulars may be obtained either from the Chairman of the Committee of Selection, or by communicating with the Offices of The Rhodes Trust, Seymour House, Waterloo Place, London, S. W.

sons own and manage all of the companies concerned in the production and distribution of the gas supplied to the Newton companies. The profits of these companies, however derived, as well as of the other allied companies to which reference has been made are pooled to meet the interest and dividend requirements of the association. Because of the existing relation the profits of the Newton company reach its owners, the Massachusetts Gas Companies, not only through the dividends but hardly less directly, if less obviously, from the sale of gas to it by the Boston company. So far as physical property is concerned, since the present owners assumed control the Newton company has been developed as an integral part of the Boston system. While its works are still capable of operation, they are no longer adequate for its needs, and there is no reasonable cause to believe that they will ever again be operated, save in some extraordinary emergency.

In view of these facts it is unnecessary for the purposes of this case to determine separately and conclusively the reasonableness of the price charged in any single transaction between the two companies or of the dividends received directly from the profits of the business of the Newton company. It is the actual profit from all sources received by the owners of its stock which will determine the reasonableness of their return.

The relations described involve some important and difficult questions touching the respective equities of the Newton and Boston consumers. No permanently satisfactory answer can be based merely upon the separate corporate existence of the companies concerned in their supply. Both are engaged in a public service and are affected with a public interest. They are within their charter powers and are doubtless actuated by a sound business judgment in concentrating the production of gas for the entire territory within common control. But, so far as the consumers are concerned, the fact remains that the source of their supply is common and to the extent to which the cost of producing the gas affects the price to the consumer, the Board has difficulty in finding any greater or different obligation on the part of the Newton as compared with the Boston consumer. Broadly speaking this is also true with respect to distribution, administrative and other expenses, although, because of the separate corporate organization maintained, distribution expenses are more clearly distinguishable and attributable to the different groups of customers. The company claimed and the returns show a difference of about five cents in the cost of distributing gas in the Newton as compared with the Boston territory. On the other hand, it practically conceded the soundness of what has been said in a suggestion at the opening of the hearing looking to the consolidation of the companies. This suggestion was later withdrawn and it would be inexpedient to consider it here further than to say that its discussion would necessarily involve another problem of great importance, inasmuch as the dividend and price is fixed for the Boston company by the so-called "Sliding Scale" statute, applicable only to that company, and an inquiry is now pending as to the expediency of that form of regulation.

A good deal was said at the hearings with respect to the question of depreciation. Under the former local management a dividend of eight per cent was maintained for many years and a substantial surplus, invested in fixed property, was built up out of earnings. Doubtless this surplus is more than sufficient to take care of the inevitable loss resulting from the abandonment of the generating works and also of the excess paid for the Waltham property over any reasonable valuation of the plant acquired. The present owners, however, have made no charges for depreciation other than for mains, services and meters abandoned, taken up or retired from service. Practically all extensions have been built with borrowed money, and, between the price paid for the gas purchased of the Boston company and the dividends paid to the stockholders, substantially all of the earnings have been exhausted. The effect of this policy upon the company's property in relation to its authorized capital is obvious, and it is a factor affecting materially the reasonableness of the return and any future allowance for depreciation.

It has seemed unnecessary to discuss in this decision certain views with respect to the elements to be considered in a rate case which were presented at the hearings. It is perhaps sufficient to add that in the Board's opinion the price hereinafter named will yield, above all reasonable costs of conducting the company's affairs, a fair return upon the property which it is actively and necessarily employing for the public convenience.

The Board recommends that in all bills rendered on and after the first day of August, 1915, the net price charged for gas sold and delivered by the Newton and Watertown Gas Light Company shall not exceed eighty-five cents (85c) a thousand cubic feet.

For the Board,
ALONZO R. WEED,
Chairman.

In Absence

Your friends and your loved ones are only as far away as the nearest telephone.

You like to think of them enjoying themselves at the seashore, in the country or in the mountains, even though the claims of business hold you in town.

Absence need not mean total separation, however. There's a wonderful comfort and pleasure in chatting with them daily by telephone. And the sound of your voice will be hailed with joy.

SUFFRAGE AT MARION

Statements Explaining Both Sides of the Question

HAT SUFFRAGE RESOLUTION

The endorsement of Equal Suffrage a vote of 203 to 99 at the recent meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs has led many persons to complain that it was a fair expression of opinion; whereas the Council of the State Federation has voted to send out the following statement:—

The suffrage resolution did not originate with the Executive Board of the Federation, but was presented to the resolutions committee in the regular by a delegate to the convention. Executive Board ruled that such resolution might properly come before the convention at this time. The act of the Federation as defined in its constitution—"to secure more acquaintance among Women's Clubs of Massachusetts and to their work along educational, biological and humanitarian lines"—does not forbid the consideration of question.

The convention was made up of accredited delegates chosen by the individual clubs according to their usual procedure. No person was allowed upon the floor without a credential signed by the secretary of the club which he represented and countersigned by the credentials committee of the Federation. The convention was therefore competent to transact all business of the Federation; to pass resolutions, to elect officers, and to consider any business which might properly come before it. The Equal Suffrage Resolution was on a par with four other resolutions, and with selection of officers.

The convention at Marion was not an inference of presidents as has been by one critic, but a regular annual meeting made up of accredited delegates. Four weeks' notice, except in case of revision of the constitution and the presentation of the official ballot, is not required; but in this case, in order that anyone opposed to the possibility of a resolution on suffrage was sent on May 12, with official call for the meeting. The fact that the question was likely to come up was so well known that on May 10 an anti-suffrage convention in Springfield gathered a group of anti-suffrage club women who passed a resolution deploring the introduction of the subject of equal suffrage into the Federation, and the vice-president of the Anti-Suffrage Association criticized the clubs against the introduction of a suffrage resolution several before the meeting at Marion.

Some, however, appear to argue that equal suffrage is more than a mere partisan matter; that it is a vital issue transcending party politics and affecting in the broadest manner the whole future of democracy. If this is the case, the question should have been brought before all the clubs at an early period of the year, so that there might have been free and full discussion.

usual stand in passing an Equal Suffrage Resolution. Twenty-seven other State Federations and the General Federation of Women's Clubs had previously endorsed political equality regardless of sex.

THE MARION CONVENTION

On Saturday, July 17, the council of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs issued a statement in regard to the action of the convention at Marion, June 25, which passed a resolution endorsing equal suffrage. As not a "few," but many, persons complain of this action, the following statement is issued:

The Association of Non-Partisan Club Women believes that the conduct of the Marion meeting was in the main technically correct, although it is not quite clear why a ballot and a second count were not granted, when demanded, nor why the motion to adjourn was at one time ruled debatable, at another time not. But waiving technicalities as inessential, the Non-Partisan Association takes a different view of the fundamental situation from the one put forward by the council in their statement.

The council quoted the clause of the constitution of the federation, which declares the object of the federation to be "to secure more thorough acquaintance among the women's clubs of Massachusetts and to unify their work along educational, sociological and humanitarian lines." They omit all reference to the bylaw, which explicitly states that "any woman's club in Massachusetts which is regularly organized with constitution and by-laws, with objects unsectarian and non-partisan, is eligible for membership in this federation." Yet this clause would seem to imply positively, what is also dictated by common sense, that the federation should keep clear of partisan action.

Now a resolution endorsing equal suffrage is either partisan or it is not. The Non-Partisan Association believes such a resolution is distinctly partisan. There are at present in Massachusetts two political organizations, one for and one against equal suffrage, and both subject to the laws for regulating political bodies under the Corrupt Practices Act. If this does not make the question partisan, we do not know what does.

Some, however, appear to argue that equal suffrage is more than a mere partisan matter; that it is a vital issue transcending party politics and affecting in the broadest manner the whole future of democracy. If this is the case, the question should have been brought before all the clubs at an early period of the year, so that there might have been free and full discussion.

JITNEY QUESTION IN COURT

Three Judges Sit On Case Against Waltham Bus Co.

The postponed trial of the Waltham Auto Bus Co. and two of its employees for operating a hackney carriage in the city of Newton without a license was held last Saturday morning and Judge Kennedy deemed the case of sufficient importance to invite the two Associate Judges, William F. Bacon and Frank M. Cope land to sit with him. City Solicitor Bishop represented the prosecution and Mr. William J. Bannon of Waltham appeared for the defendants. Chief Inspector F. B. Fletcher and Officer Richard J. Goode were the only witnesses and told of riding on the bus of the company from Nonantum square to Waltham Common, paying five cents for the ride over, after the car had passed the Waltham line and paying their fare coming back before the car had reached the Waltham line. There was also testimony to the effect that on the return trip the conductor asked if anyone wanted to be landed in Newtonville, the bus going directly through Crafts street, if no one wished to go the other way. There was also a statement that one passenger had boarded the car about 100 feet from the Waltham-Newton line in Waltham and had immediately paid the fare and had been taken to Nonantum square. There was little dispute over the facts, Attorney Bannon relying wholly on the fact that a license was not required for the class of business done by this company. He said that the regulations of the aldermen as to hackney carriages simply covered the traffic within the city limits and said that there was no question that Newton could not require the White Mountain busses to be licensed in this city if it chose to make it a stopping place for one of their tours. He also suggested the foolishness of requiring every taxi-cab driver in Boston to take out a Newton license before he could bring a passenger into this city, and he even went so far as to say that the taxi-cab driver, having brought out a passenger might solicit a passenger for the return trip without such license. Mr. Bannon said the company has no desire to engage in any other than a legitimate business and would like to take up passengers in Newton but had been refused permission to do so by the city government. He claimed that the business of the company is not completed in Newton and referred to a Supreme court decision in 1848 where the Court stated that the city of Boston could not require a license for the operation of a line of busses between that city and the then city of Roxbury.

Mr. Bannon was questioned by Judge Kennedy as to the liability of his company as a common carrier in case of an accident within the city of Newton and as to the meaning of the word express used on their placard. In addition Judge Kennedy brought out the fact that the five cents paid was intended to cover a trip between Newton and Waltham and not merely to the boundary line.

Mr. Bishop in reply said that the 1848 court decision was against a license for the operation of a line of busses between that city and the then city of Roxbury.

LAWN PARTY

Newton Forersters Enjoy An Afternoon At Cabot Park

Several hundred members of Middlesex Court, M. C. O. F. attended the lawn party held Saturday on Cabot Park, Newtonville, under auspices of the degree staff. Among the guests were Mayor Edwin O. Childs, Maj. Thomas L. Walsh, William S. Thomas of the high standing committee and James S. Cannon of Newton.

Mr. Cannon officiated as the introducing officer and the guests were warmly applauded. The affair started with a baseball game between the Beechwoods and the Catholic Union of Newton. The former team was the victor, 3 to 2. T. Dorsey and Connolly pitched for the Beechwoods, with Morrison on the receiving end, while the players for the Catholic Union were Matt Dorsey and McHale.

Games for the younger people were run off under the direction of John J. Hines. In the 440-yard run Silver carried off first prize and in the 100-yard dash honors fell to Hayes. The three-legged race was won by Williamson and Carey and Miss Blackney won the prize in the ball throwing contest. In the evening dancing was enjoyed. The president of the staff, James Ryan and Thomas F. Hickey, secretary and treasurer were in charge, assisted by a large committee.

HOW TO KEEP COOL

How to keep cool and clean—that is the Summer Problem, but Electricity, and especially the Electric Iron, can help you to solve it.

Everyone knows that more washing and ironing is done in a week in summer than in a month in winter, and therefore it is the aim of all to get it done as quickly as possible and keep cool while doing it.

The use of an Electric Iron saves time, for it does the work of three "sad irons"; it saves steps, for it is not necessary to tramp back and forth to the stove to change the irons; and it saves fuel, for it eliminates the need of a hot fire in the stove. The ironing does not necessarily have to be done in the kitchen; by merely lengthening the cord it can be carried out on the porch, or even under a shady tree on the lawn.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston is now selling an Electric Iron for $2.50, as will be seen from an advertisement on another page of this paper. It is an opportunity no one should miss. An Electric Iron will help to make this summer a cooler, cleaner and more comfortable one for all.

CHRISTIAN LAYMEN

Making Plans To Revive Interest In Religion

Nominally the membership of Christian churches in this part of the country keeps up with the increase of population. Practically there is a widespread belief that church members do not count for as much as they used to count as positive religious forces in public and private life. The recent business men's movement has been criticised as a spasmodic effort and a failure. Direct challenge, therefore, is thrown into the faces of alleged Christian business men today to show that they have the real Christian stuff in them and that they are worthy of the honored line of succession in which they stand. They will have ample opportunity to meet this challenge by showing how strongly and widely they support the coming national missionary campaign. This is a laymen's missionary movement, covering the whole nation from about 100 different cities, well organized, to culminate in a national missionary Congress in Washington April 25 to 28, 1916, Eastern Massachusetts—all east of Worcester county—will have its opportunity at the Laymen's Convention in Boston, November 17, 18 and 19, 1915, in Tremont Temple. It is expected to have about one month of preparation, by well equipped speakers from different denominations addressing local audiences throughout the territory, and to follow it by about one month of further work after the convention to round up and consolidate the work of the convention. Practical results for home and foreign missions and for local church life are the prime object of the campaign.

Strong organization has been effected to carry the movement through to success. United in the effort are the leading religious clubs of different denominations, such as the Methodist Social Union, the Episcopal Club, the Boston Baptist Social Union, the Universalist Club and others; also the Boston Federation of Churches and the New England Laymen's Missionary Movement Committee. Congressman Frederick W. Dallinger of Cambridge is the chairman of the executive committee. The vice-chairman is Ernest S. Butler, address at the Ford Building, who is also chairman of the committee on arrangements and supper. The secretary, and chairman of the publicity committee is Duane White, 24 Milk street. The treasurer and chairman of the finance committee is Ethelbert V. Grallib, the President of

Second of a Series of Articles Explaining the Management of the City

The office of clerk or "clerk" as it is spelled in the more ancient records is one of the most important in the city, as it comes in constant contact with every citizen from the cradle to the grave.

In many respects it is a state rather than a city office, for many of its duties are arbitrarily fixed by statute and must be performed.

Recording the vital statistics of the city is one of these state duties and a duplicate of the annual records of births, marriages and deaths must be filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth. The care of the elections is also another important state duty, which cannot be ignored.

While the return of births which take place in this city is required by law from every physician, who is paid 25 cents for making such return, it has been found necessary to check up these returns by having a canvass made of the entire city once each year. The canvasser usually begins immediately after the New Year, and with the growing cosmopolitan character of the city, an interpreter is often necessary to obtain all the required facts from the numerous families of Poles, French and Italians. 879 births were recorded last year, 440 males and 439 females.

Persons in this state who wish to marry must obtain a certificate from the city or town clerk where each resides at the cost of one dollar. The application for this certificate must be made five days before it can be issued, unless special permission for immediate use is given by the judge of the local police court. 427 marriage intentions were filed last year. After the marriage has taken place the person performing the same must return the certificate to the city clerk properly endorsed as to the time and place of the marriage, and it becomes a part of the permanent records of the office. 452 marriages were so recorded in 1914.

Returns of death are first filed with the board of health, and once a month are deposited with the city clerk for permanent record.

The city clerk is also clerk of the board of aldermen and has charge of all the clerical work in connection therewith. This involves the filing, indexing and the proper care of all the papers acted upon by the board, making a record of the same, and causing copies and notices of the action taken by the board to be given to persons interested. As over 40,000 papers are now on file in this connection, it can be easily seen that considerable labor is necessary in this department. And yet the system of indexing is so complete that any paper desired, whether filed in 1915 or in 1874 can be found within a few seconds.

It is also a part of the city clerk's duties to issue the many kinds of licenses granted by the aldermen and approved by the mayor and to collect the required fee for the same. The city clerk also issues the annual licenses to keep dogs, this being a county matter. 1524 dog licenses were issued last year and the sum of $3512 remitted to the county treasurer. It may be of interest to note in this connection that the dog money from all the cities and towns in Middlesex County, is used as a fund from which damages caused by dogs throughout the county, and approved by the County Commissioners, are paid, and the balance is apportioned and returned to each municipality the following year. Newton received all of its contribution but $280.17 in 1914, and by a further statute, this money must be used for either school or library purposes. In this city it is placed to the credit of the school department.

Licenses to hunt game are also issued by the city clerk at a cost of $1 each for residents and $15 for unincorporated citizens. $490 was received from this source in 1914 and the amount paid over to the Commissioners on Fisheries and Game as required by law.

Possibly the most interesting work of this interesting office is that connected with the conduct of elections. This includes the selection of proper polling places, the fitting up of the same for the work of the precinct officers, the preparation of ballots for the city election and the care of the ballots furnished for the state election, the arrangements for recording and forwarding the vote and the cancelled ballots, and in connection with the registrars of voters, of which body the city clerk is also clerk, the preparation of the voting lists and the registration of new voters. With the complicated election laws in this state, the elections of one year are hardly over, before it is necessary to prepare for the next year. The voting lists are first gone over in the most careful manner, to eliminate the names of persons who have died, moved out of the city, or who have not been assessed on April 1st; transfers made of the names of those who have moved from one part of the city to another, and the voting list as thus revised forms the basis for the list to be used at the next election. As there were 7503 names on the list at the last election, it will be readily seen that no small amount of labor is required as well as the utmost care. The city clerk usually does the preliminary work for the mayor in the appointment of the 96 election officers required by the 16 voting precincts of the city, but as the pay for these positions is usually good, ranging from $8 to $10 per day, there is not much difficulty in obtaining fairly good men, altho they must be of different political parties. Registration of voters is required before every primary and every election, and it has been the custom in this city to give an opportunity for voters to register in each village, at least once each fall. On the last day for registration fixed by law, the registrars must remain in continuous session from noon until ten o'clock P. M. The cost of elections in 1914 was over $4600 and the cost of registration was about $400.

The preparation of the jury list is also a duty of the registrars of voters, under the direction of the city clerk. The law requires that the jury list which consists of the names of voters liable for jury duty shall contain 400

Once again we call attention to the possibility as well as the extreme probability of many voters losing their vote at the coming state primary thru the complicated ballot which will have to be used in consequence of the abolition of party enrollment. The ballot will be made up in sections, each party being given one section by itself and the voter must restrict his ballot markings to one party, or the entire ballot is void.

But little interest is manifested at present in the contests for the Republican nomination for county offices. Mr. Messer's fight for sheriff is being watched with the greatest interest as he has many friends in this city. County Commissioner Williams will probably have a long lead over his comparatively unknown competitor, while County Treasurer Hayden should have a walk over.

The tax rate will probably be announced during the coming week and there is every reason to believe that little, if any increase over the present rate of $18.80 will be made. With the marked decrease in the value of stocks and bonds, it will be extremely gratifying if Newton can maintain a level tax rate the present year.

The editor of the GRAPHIC gratefully appreciates the kind endorsement of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for representative at the coming primary, as given him by the editor of the "Newton Times."

Councillor Guy A. Ham has many friends in this city in his campaign for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor. His work for the party for the past fifteen years is evidently appreciated.

The city garage matter progresses so slowly that it is evident there is little interest in its accomplishment, notwithstanding its evident convenience as well as its probable economy.

The Woodland Golf Club of Auburn-dale has been the Mecca for golf enthusiasts the present week, with the annual tournament for the state amateur championship in full swing.

Tennis week at Longwood will attract many lovers of that sport from this city, as many of the best players of the country are entered.

JITNEY QUESTION

cense from the fact that the law at that time did not require a license and the Boston aldermen had exceeded its authority in demanding one. He called attention to the head note to the decision which clearly stated that the Boston city government had the right to regulate this line of busses, and that the law now authorizes the city government to require a license. He also said that the employment of a taxi cab in Boston, makes that driver the personal servant of the employer and that he drives where he is told to drive and that it is not a public conveyance in any sense of the term. In the present case, Mr. Bishop believed that the contract to be carried to Waltham was virtually made in Nonantum square between the Company and its passengers and that the time or place for payment of the fare was not material.

Judge Kennedy rendered a lengthy decision this morning which he stated had been the unanimous opinion of his associates. He found the Waltham Auto Bus Co. guilty and fined it $15, and its chauffeur and conductor were fined $5 each. The defendants all appealed.

NARROW ESCAPE

Two employees of the H. P. Hood & Sons Co., attending the annual outing of the Mutual Benefit Association yesterday on the Riverside Recreation Grounds, had a narrow escape from drowning before a great many spectators, who were watching the water sports.

Nathan Praver, aged 22, of 692 East 34 street, South Boston, who had waded out beyond his depth, became so excited when a fellow employee, Thomas Pine, aged 29, of 12 Howell street, Dorchester, attempted to bring him ashore that he clutched his rescuer's arms and pulled him under water.

When the two resurfaced, Frank Tedder, an attendant, threw them a life preserver and Guy C. Myrick, assistant physical director, jumped in with his clothes on and pulled the two men to shore. Both were quite weak after their struggle.

More than 500 members and friends gathered at the outing. A buffet luncheon was served and in the afternoon a baseball game was played between the Charlestown division and the Forest Hills division, which, after a five-inning game, resulted in a 3-to-2 victory for the former team.

During the evening dancing was enjoyed, while many spent the evening canoeing on the Charles River.

NORUMBEGA PARK

Adjectives cannot adequately describe the beauty and luxuriant display of flowers, shrubs and foliage to be seen now at this famous resort at Auburndale on the Charles. Owing to the generous rainfall a springlike freshness seems to have taken hold of all nature. The beautiful Charles River with its canoeing festivities is more popular than ever.

Sunday night the great photo play "Opened Shutters" will be the feature. Next week Phil Ott, the great Dutch comedian with his beauty chorus will appear in the latest musical success, "Hey There, New York." At the Grape Arbor Cafe, excellent service and cuisine is found. If you have not seen the baby lynx in the Zoological Gardens, you have missed a treat.

Shall the Proposed Amendment to the Constitution Enabling Women to Vote be Approved and Ratified

THE VICTORY IN DENMARK

The overwhelming vote in the Danish Parliament in behalf of full suffrage for women shows how fast this reform is coming. Up to eight years ago, the women of Denmark had not even the school vote, and could not serve on a board of public charities. In 1907 Denmark gave them the right to vote for members of educational and charitable boards, and made them eligible to serve. In 1908 it gave women who were tax-payers or the wives of tax-payers a vote for all officers except members of Parliament. The bill just passed provides for full Parliamentary suffrage for all women, without any tax-qualification.

A. S. B.

SUFFRAGE NEEDED IN THE HOME

Suffrage is needed by those who make the home, because it is the most convenient way of securing action which shall be of service to the home.

Statisticians in Europe and America have called attention to the astounding loss of infant life and to the importance of making careful inquiry into its causes. The death rate for the total population is slowly but surely declining, but the death rate for babies less than one year old is not declining. Of the 300,000 babies dying in the United States yearly, at least 150,000 could be saved.

Women must "protect the home," because all homes are knit together. If one suffers from impure food, impure air, impure water, it affects others. No woman today can protect her own home against the civic neglect of a community which does not know or care in what sort of house she lives.

The Rubicon was passed when Mrs. Ellen H. Richards of Boston analyzed the city water supply. Which is more womanly, to vote for clean water for the whole city or to sit at home and buy costly bottled water for your own children, not caring for the others?

The great good of suffrage is that it will educate women to the realization of their responsibilities. It is only by knowing, and by being recognized as fairly worthy to have their opinion counted, that women can really do their best work.

Men in Massachusetts have voted since 1620—for 295 years—and I do not believe any body of men ever voted much more wisely. They came here because they were tired of persecution and indirect influence, and wanted a direct voice in their own government. We, too, shall find that we like it better when we have a direct voice. Massachusetts men should vote YES on November 2.

WOMEN FIGHT CHILD LABOR

Throughout the country the industries in which the hours are the longest, wages lowest and conditions the most inhuman are those in which the labor of women and children prevails. Our friends opposed to woman suffrage make a great point of the argument that giving the vote to women will do away with child labor. But if it is child labor that provides a seventy-two-hour week for working women in some States, pays scrub-women $22 a month and allows babies to make flowers in the tenements of New York for twelve cents a day, the sooner we get rid of child labor and get down to brass tacks the sooner we can look ourselves in the face with respect.

I have seen it stated that the best child labor laws are in the non-suffrage States. That is true, but a conclusion from the fact must be combined with a statement that the worst child labor conditions in the country exist in certain non-suffrage States.

North Carolina has this winter not only refused to pass a better child labor or compulsory education law, but has even refused to provide for any kind of factory inspection. And in Pennsylvania at the present time a fight for a better child labor law is being waged against the same forces that have opposed our campaigns for an eight-hour day and no night work for children for years in that State.

Most of the controversy between the advocates and opponents of woman suffrage as to its effect on child labor legislation is fruitless, because in the Western States where the women vote child labor is a new problem, and those States can do little more than act on the advice of older industrial civilizations in legislating against it. I believe it is significant, however, that in those Western States notable improvements along other lines of human welfare have been made since the women have had the vote. I believe that woman suffrage does tend to improve legislation not only as regards labor and child labor, but in all lines of human welfare.

But I base my belief in woman suffrage on two considerations. The first is my belief, in democratic government, that if we believe in popular government we cannot believe in government by only half the people. The present form of so-called popular government was attained step by step. In colonial times only about 4 per cent of the men voted. Men were disfranchised in some colonies for lack of property or for religious reasons. But we have gradually done away with those restrictions, and the enfranchisement of women is but the next logical step in the direction we have been going.

The second consideration is the right of some women to vote when many of them apparently do not wish to. When the Civil War brought about the abolition of slavery the 3,000,000 slaves had not all cried for freedom, yet no one seems to believe that slavery should not have been wiped out. My right to vote I consider an inheritance, not depending on whether a majority of the males share the same view. Consistency compels me to believe that if one woman desires the ballot and desires to participate in the affairs of government that right is hers, even though 99 per cent of the women should oppose or refrain from such responsibility.

THE SUFFRAGE DOCTRINE OF RESPONSIBILITY

As Expounded by
DR. ANNA HOWARD SHAW

President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, Appearing in the Special Suffrage Campaign Issue Evening Post, New York, Thursday, Feb. 25, 1915.

"I believe in Woman Suffrage whether or not women vote or not. I believe that all women vote right or all women vote wrong; whether women will love their husbands after they vote or not; whether they will neglect their children, or never have any children.

"Some people do not understand the woman suffrage cause. They seem to think that suffragists can give them better laws. But Doctor Anna Shaw explains the woman suffrage creed. So all of you in any doubt, this little lesson read.

"In Woman Suffrage I believe, To Suffrage I belong. I don't care if we all vote right or wrong, or if a wife should leave her home or from her husband and see. So long as women get the vote That's all that bothers me.

"In Woman Suffrage I believe If husbands lose their wives, Or children are neglected too, For what are children's lives? But 'Votes for Women' is my cry. All other things I scorn. To me the 'Vote' is everything If not a child was born.

So now you know of Suffrage As told by Doctor Shaw. You know just what it's all about And what they're fighting for. Now when the crisis comes round And to the polls you go, Just bear in mind the Suffrage Creed And write a great big NO.

PHIL HANNA.

The Rev. Anna Shaw, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, says: "Much of the action of the war cannot help seeing that it is helping the cause of equal suffrage, especially among those who come out and see. As never before, and they are doing all those things which men have done and which the men have insisted the women could not do. They are acting as police, as letter carriers, as hack drivers, working in the fields, getting the crops, and busy at all the other tasks which have always been confined to the field of masculine activity. Now that the women are freed from the shackles of convention, they will stay so and the governments of the different countries will be able to push them into the background when the war is over.

The Rev. Anna Shaw, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, says: "Much of the action of the war cannot help seeing that it is helping the cause of equal suffrage, especially among those who come out and see. As never before, and they are doing all those things which men have done and which the men have insisted the women could not do. They are acting as police, as letter carriers, as hack drivers, working in the fields, getting the crops, and busy at all the other tasks which have always been confined to the field of masculine activity. Now that the women are freed from the shackles of convention, they will stay so and the governments of the different countries will be able to push them into the background when the war is over.

When women leave the home in great numbers to enter into outside competition with the men, the economic situation arises. Ellen Key, the great Swedish Feminist, tells how it has resulted in the competition between the sexes produces overcrowding of the labor market, which in turn produces a high rate of unemployment, high infant mortality, a debased domestic life with its consequent degradation of the child, and also produces ill feeling between the sexes.

At the last election in Chicago, only 24,000 women actually went to the polls and cast their ballots although nearly 75,000 were of voting age. What kind of a vote do you think composed the great majority of the more than 400,000 Chicago women who refused to vote? The answer is, of course, hardly. The less desirable always vote just as do the less desirable men. The women who stay at home are the women who believe they have a sphere of influence for good without the ballot, and that if they would have with it, who do not want to be like men and who resent having men's duties and burdens thrust upon them.

Herein lies one of the great dangers of imposing votes on women before they are able to use them. They have any desire for them or feel any moral obligation respecting them. It is only a small number of the most capable of women will ever exercise the voting privilege and will soon tire of it, leaving the vast number of undesirable elements who will be marshalled by unscrupulous politicians to mischievous ends.

(From The N. Y. Sun, May 19, 1915.)

Thomas Jefferson said: "Democracy cannot be based on a principle when those who make laws cease to be those able to enforce laws." Think that over, Mr. Voter.

CO. C AT CAMP

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

By ARTHUR B. REEVE

The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Presented in Collaboration With the Pathe Players and the Eclectic Film Company

SYNOPSIS.

The formation of a partnership as professor and aide in crime science between Craig Kennedy, university chemistry professor, and Walter Jameson, newspaper man, is at once followed by their becoming interested in a series of murders by a master criminal who leaves no other clue to his identity than the sign manual of a "Clutching Hand." Elaine Dodge, whose father is one of the latest victims of the mysterious murderer, witnesses the beginning of Kennedy's scientific investigation of the murder.

SECOND EPISODE

The "Twilight Sleep."

Kennedy had thrown himself wholeheartedly into the solution of the mysterious Dodge case.

Far into the night, after the challenge of the forged finger print, he continued at work, endeavoring to extract a clue from the meager evidence—a bit of cloth and trace of poison already obtained from other cases. We dropped around at the Dodge house the next morning. Early though it was, we found Elaine—pale, but more lovely than ever, and Perry Bennett, themselves vainly endeavoring to solve the mystery of the Clutching Hand.

They were at Dodge's desk, she in the big desk chair, he standing beside her looking over some papers.

"There's nothing there," Bennett was saying as we entered.

"I could not help feeling that he was gazing down at Elaine a bit more tenderly than mere business warranted.

"Have you—found anything?" queried Elaine anxiously, turning eagerly to Kennedy.

"Nothing—yet," he answered, shaking his head, but conveying a quiet idea of confidence in his tone.

Just then Jennings, the butler, entered, bringing the morning papers. Elaine seized the Star and hastily opened it. On the first page was the story I had telephoned down very late in the hope of catching a last city edition.

We all bent over and Craig read aloud:

"CLUTCHING HAND" STILL AT LARGE

New York's Master Criminal Remains Undetected—Perpetrates New Darling Murder and Robbery on Millionaire Dodge.

He had scarcely finished reading the brief but alarming news story that followed and laid the paper on the desk when a stone came smashing through the window from the street.

Started, we all jumped to our feet. Craig hurried to the window. Not a soul was in sight!

He stooped and picked up the stone. To it was attached a piece of paper. Quickly he unfolded it and read:

"Craig Kennedy will give up his search for the 'Clutching Hand'—or die!"

Later I recalled that there seemed to be a slight noise downstairs, as if at the cellar window, through which the masked man had entered the night before.

In point of fact, one who had been outside at the time might actually have seen a sinister face at that cellar window, but to us upstairs it was invisible. The face was that of the servant, Michael.

Without another word Kennedy passed into the drawing room and took his hat and coat. Both Elaine and Bennett followed.

"I'm afraid I must ask you to excuse me—for the present," Craig apologized.

Elaine looked at him anxiously.

"You—you will not let that letter intimidate you?" she pleaded, laying her soft white hand on his arm. "Oh, Mr. Kennedy," she added, bravely keeping back the tears, "avenge him! All the money in the world would be too little to pay—it only—"

At the mere mention of money Kennedy's face seemed to cloud, but only for a moment.

"I'll try," he said simply.

Elaine did not withdraw her hand as she continued to look up at him.

"Miss Dodge," he went on, his voice steady, as though he were repressing something, "I will never take another case until the 'Clutching Hand' is captured."

The look of gratitude she gave him would have been a princely reward in itself.

It was some time after these events that Kennedy, reconstructing what had happened, ran across, in a strange way which I need not tire the reader by telling a Doctor Haynes, head of the Hillside Sanitarium for Women, whose story I shall relate substantially as we received it from his own lips:

It must have been that same night a distinguished visitor drove up in a cab to our Hillside sanitarium, rang the bell and was admitted to my office.

I am, by the way, the superintending physician, and that night I was sitting with Doctor Thompson, my assistant, in the office discussing a rather interesting case, when an attendant came in with a card and handed it to me. It read simply, "Dr. Ludwig Reinstrom, Coblenz."

"Here's that Doctor Reinstrom, Thompson, about whom my friend in Germany wrote the other day," I remarked, nodding to the attendant to admit Doctor Reinstrom.

I might explain that while I was abroad some time ago I made a particular study of the "Daemmerschlaf"—otherwise, the "twilight sleep"—at Freiburg where it was developed, and at other places in Germany where the subject had attracted great attention. I was much impressed and had imported the treatment to Hillside.

While we waited I reached into my desk and drew out the letter to which I referred, which ended, I recall:

"As Doctor Reinstrom is in America, he will probably call on you. I am sure you will be glad to know him."

"With kindest regards, I am, 'Fraternally yours, EMIL SCHWARZ, M. D., 'Director, Leipzig Institute of Medicine."

"Most happy to meet you, Doctor Reinstrom," I greeted the new arrival, as he entered our office.

For several minutes we sat and chatted of things medical here and abroad.

"What is it, doctor," I asked finally, "that interests you most in America?"

"Oh," he replied quickly with an expressive gesture, "it is the broadmindedness with which you adopt the best from all over the world, regardless of prejudice. For instance, I am very much interested in the new 'twilight sleep.' Of course, you have borrowed it largely from us, but it interests me to see whether you have modified it with practice. In fact, I have come to Hillside sanitarium particularly to see it used. Perhaps we may learn something from you."

It was most gracious, and both Doctor Thompson and myself were charmed by our visitor. I reached over and touched a call button and our head nurse entered from a rear room.

"Are there any operations going on now?" I asked.

She looked mechanically at her watch. "Yes, there are two cases, now, I think," she answered.

"Would you like to follow our technique?" I asked, turning to Doctor Reinstrom.

"I should be delighted," he acquiesced.

A moment later we passed down the corridor of the sanitarium, still chatting. At the door of a ward I spoke to the attendant, who indicated that a patient was about to be anesthetized, and Doctor Reinstrom and I entered the room.

There, in perfect quiet, which is an essential part of the treatment, were several woman patients lying in bed in the ward. Before us two nurses and a doctor were in attendance on one.

I spoke to the doctor, Doctor Holmes, by the way, who bowed politely to the distinguished Doctor Reinstrom, then turned quickly to his work.

"Miss Sears," he asked of one of the nurses, "will you bring me that hypodermic needle?"

"You will see, Doctor Reinstrom," I injected in a low tone, "that we follow in the main your Freiburg treatment. We use scopolamin and narkophin."

I held up the bottle, as I said it, a rather peculiar shaped bottle, too.

"And the pain?" he asked.

"Practically the same as in your experience abroad. We do not render the patient unconscious, but prevent her from remembering anything that goes on."

Doctor Holmes, the attending physician, was just starting the treatment. Filling his hypodermic, he selected a spot on the patient's arm where it had been scrubbed and sterilized, and injected the narcotic.

"And you say they have no recollection of anything that happens?" asked Reinstrom.

"Absolutely none—if the treatment is given properly," I replied, confidently.

"Wonderful!" ejaculated Reinstrom as we left the room.

Now comes the strange part of my story. After Reinstrom had gone, Doctor Holmes, the attending physician of the woman whom he had seen anesthetized, missed his syringe and the bottle of scopolamin.

Holmes, Miss Sears and Miss Stern all hunted, but it could not be found. Others had to be procured.

I thought little of it at the time, but since then it has occurred to me that it might interest you, Professor Kennedy, and I give it to you for what it may be worth.

It was early the next morning that I awoke to find Kennedy already up and gone from our apartment. I knew he must be at the laboratory, and, gathering the mail, which the postman had just slipped through the letter slot, I went over to the university to see him.

As I looked over the letters to call out my own one in a woman's hand writing on attractive note paper addressed to him caught my eye.

As I came up the path to the chemistry building I saw through the window that, in spite of his getting there early, he was finding it difficult to keep his mind on his work. It was the first time I had ever known anything to interfere with science in his life.

"Well," I exclaimed as I entered, "you are the early bird. Did you have any breakfast?"

I tossed down the letters. He did not reply. So I became absorbed in the morning paper. Still, I did not neglect to watch him covertly out of the corner of my eye. Quickly he ran over the letters, instead of taking them, one by one, in his usual methodical way. I quite complimented my superior acumen. He selected the dainty note.

A moment Craig looked at it in anticipation, then tore it open eagerly. I was still watching his face over the top of the paper and was surprised to see that it showed, first, amazement, then pain, as though something had hurt him.

He read it again—then looked straight ahead, as if in a daze.

Suddenly he jumped up, bringing his tightly clenched fist down with a loud clap into the palm of his hand.

"By heaven!" he exclaimed, "I—I will!"

He strode hastily to the telephone. Almost angrily he seized the receiver and asked for a number.

"What's the matter, Craig?" I blurted out eagerly.

As he waited for the number, he threw the letter over to me. I took it and read:

"Professor Craig Kennedy, The University, The Heights, City. Dear Sir:

"I have come to the conclusion that your work is a hindrance rather than an assistance in clearing up my father's death, and I hereby beg to state that your services are no longer required. This is a final decision, and beg that you will not try to see me again regarding the matter."

"Very truly yours, 'ELAINE DODGE."

If it had been a bomb I could not have been more surprised.

I could not make it out. Kennedy impatiently worked the receiver up and down, repeating the number. "Hello—hello," he repeated. "Yes—hello. Is Miss—oh—good morning, Miss Dodge."

He was hurrying along as if to give her no chance to cut him off. "I have just received a letter, Miss Dodge, tellme—" "Miss Dodge has just been telling me—" "Yes," interrupted Craig. "Look, Miss Dodge, this is it."

He handed her the letter. She almost seized it, examining it carefully. Her large eyes opening wider in wonder.

"This is certainly my writing and my note paper," she murmured, "but I never wrote the letter!"

Craig looked from the letter to her keenly. No one said a word. For a moment Kennedy hesitated, thinking.

"Might I—er—see your room, Miss Dodge?" he asked at length.

"Why, certainly," nodded Elaine, as she led the way upstairs.

It was a dainty little room, breathing the spirit of its mistress. In fact, it seemed a sort of profanity as we all followed in after her. For a moment Kennedy stood still, then he carefully looked about. At the side of the bed, near the head, he stooped and picked up something which he held in the palm of his hand. I bent over. Something gleamed in the morning sunshine—some little thin pieces of glass. As he tried deftly to fit the tiny little bits together he seemed absorbed in thought. Quickly he raised it to his nose, as if to smell it.

"Ethyl chloride!" he muttered, wrapping the pieces carefully in a paper and putting them inside his pocket.

An instant later he crossed the room to the window and examined it. "Look!" he exclaimed.

There, plainly, were marks of a jimmy which had been inserted near the lock to pry it open.

"Miss Dodge," he asked, "might I—might I trouble you to let me see your arm?"

Wonderingly she did so, and Kennedy bent almost reverently over her plump arm examining it.

On it was a small dark discoloration, around which was a slight redness and tenderness.

"That," he said slowly, "is the mark of a hypodermic needle."

As he finished examining Elaine's arm he drew the letter from his pocket. Still facing her he said in a low tone, "Miss Dodge—you did write this letter—but under the influence of the new twilight sleep."

"Why, Craig," I exclaimed excitedly, "what do you mean?"

"Exactly what I say. With Miss Dodge's permission I shall show you

There Were Marks of a Jimmy on the Window.

me that you don't want me to continue investigating your father's death, and not to try to see you again about—"

He stopped. I could hear the reply. "Why—no—Mr. Kennedy, I have written you no letter."

The look of mingled relief and surprise that crossed Craig's face spoke volumes.

"Miss Dodge," he almost shouted, "this is a new trick of the 'Clutching Hand.' I—I'll be right over."

Craig hung up the receiver and turned from the telephone. Evidently he was thinking deeply. Suddenly his face seemed to light up. He made up his mind to something, and a moment later he opened the cabinet—that inexhaustible storehouse from which he seemed to draw weird and curious instruments that met the ever new problems which his strange profession brought to him.

I watched curiously. He took out a bottle and what looked like a little hypodermic syringe, thrust them into his pocket and, for once, oblivious to my very existence, deliberately walked out of the laboratory.

I did not propose to be thus cavalierly dismissed. I suppose it would have looked ridiculous to a third party, but I followed him as hastily as if he had tried to shut the door on his own shadow.

We arrived at the corner above the Dodge house just in time to see another visitor—Bennett—enter.

"And, Perry," we heard Elaine say, as we were ushered in, "someone has even forged my name—the handwriting and everything—telling Mr. Kennedy to drop the case—and I never knew."

She stopped as we entered. "That's the limit!" exclaimed Ben-

net. "By a small administration of the drug, which will injure you in no way, Miss Dodge, I think I can bring back the memory of all that occurred to you last night. Will you allow me?"

"Mercy, no!" protested her Aunt Josephine, who had entered the room.

"I want the experiment to be tried," Elaine said quietly.

A moment later Kennedy had placed her on a couch in the corner of the room.

"Now, Mrs. Dodge," he said, "please bring me a basin and a towel."

Aunt Josephine, reconciled, brought them. Kennedy dropped an antiseptic tablet into the water and carefully sterilized Elaine's arm just above the spot where the red mark showed. Then he drew the hypodermic from his pocket—carefully sterilized it, also, and filling it with scopolamin from the bottle.

"Just a moment, Miss Dodge," he encouraged, as he jabbed the needle into her arm.

She did not wince.

"Please lie back on the couch," he directed. Then turning to us he added, "It takes some time for this to work. Our criminal got over this fact and prevented an outcry by using ethyl chloride first. Let me reconstruct the scene."

As we watched Elaine going under slowly Craig talked.

"That night," he said, "warily, the masked criminal of the 'Clutching Hand,' bent over, his arm crooked, might have been seen down below us in the ally. Up here, Miss Dodge, worn out by the strain of her father's death, let us say, was nervously trying to read, to do anything that would take her mind off the tragedy. Perhaps she fell asleep.

"Just then the Clutching Hand appeared. He came stealthily through that window, which he had opened. A moment he hesitated, seeing Elaine asleep. Then he tiptoed over to the bed, let us say, and for a moment looked at her sleeping.

A second later he had thrust his hand into his pocket and had taken out a small glass bulb with a long thin neck. That was ethyl chloride—a drug which produces a quick anesthesia. But it lasts only a minute or two. That was enough. As he broke the glass neck of the bulb—letting the pieces fall on the floor near the bed—he shoved the thing under Elaine's face, turning his own head away and holding a handkerchief over his own nose. The mere heat of his hand is enough to cause the ethyl chloride to spray out and overcome her instantly. He steps away from her a moment and replaces the now empty vial in his pocket.

"Then he took a box from his pocket, opened it. There must have been a syringe and a bottle of scopolamin. Where they came from I do not know, but perhaps from some hospital. I shall have to find that out later. He went to Elaine, quickly jabbing the needle, with no resistance from her now. Slowly he replaced the bottle and the needle in his pocket. He could not have been in any hurry now, for it takes time for the drug to work."

Kennedy paused. Had we known at the time, Michael—he of a sinister face—must have been in the hallway that night, careful that no one saw him. A tap at the door and the "Clutching Hand" must have beckoned him. A moment's parley and they separated—"Clutching Hand" going back to Elaine, who was now under the influence of the second drug.

"Our criminal," resumed Kennedy thoughtfully, "may have shaken Elaine. She did not answer. Then he may have partly revived her. She must have been startled. 'Clutching Hand,' perhaps, was half crouching, with a big ugly blue steel revolver leveled full in her face.

"One word and I shoot!" he probably cried. "Get up!"

"Trembling, she must have done so. Your slippers and a kimono, he would naturally have ordered. She put them on mechanically. Then he must have ordered her to go out of the door and down the stairs. 'Clutching Hand' must have followed, and as he did so he would have cautiously put out the lights."

We were following, spellbound, Kennedy's graphic reconstruction of what must have happened. Evidently he had struck close to the truth. Elaine's eyes were closed. Gently Kennedy led her along. "Now, Miss Dodge," he encouraged, "try—try hard to recollect just what it was that happened last night—everything."

As Kennedy paused after his quick recital, she seemed to tremble all over. Slowly she began to speak. We stood awestruck. Kennedy had been right!

The girl was now living over again those minutes that had been forgotten—blotted out by the drug.

And it was all real to her, too—terribly real. She was speaking, plainly in terror.

"I see a man—oh, such a figure—with a mask. He holds a gun in my face—he threatens me. I put on my kimono and slippers, as he tells me. I am in a daze. I know what I am doing—and I don't know. I go out with him, downstairs, into the library."

Elaine shuddered again at the recollection. "Ugh! The room is dark, the room where he killed my father. Moonlight outside streams in. This masked man and I come in. He switches on the lights.

"Go to the safe," he says, and I do it—the new safe, you know. 'Do you know the combination?' he asks me. 'Yes,' I reply, too frightened to say no.

"Open it then," he says, waving that awful revolver closer. I do so. Hastily he rummages through it, throwing papers here and there. But he seems not to find what he is after and turns away, swearing fearfully.

"Hang it!" he cries at me. 'Where else did your father keep papers?' I point in desperation at the desk. He takes one last look at the safe, shoves all the papers he has strewn on the floor back again and slams the safe shut.

"Now, come on, he says, indicating with the gun that he wants me to follow him away from the safe. At the desk he repeats the search. But he finds nothing. Almost I think he is about to kill me. 'Where else did your father keep papers?' he hisses fiercely, still threatening me with the gun.

"I am too frightened to speak. But at last I am able to say, 'I—I don't know!' Again he threatens me. 'As God is my judge,' I cry, 'I don't know.' It is fearful. Will he shoot me?"

"Thank heaven! At last he believes me. But such a look of fabled fury I have never seen on any human face before.

"Sit down!" he growls, adding, 'at the desk.' I do.

"Take some of your note paper—the best." I do that, too.

"And a pen," he goes on. My fingers can hardly hold it.

"Now—write!" he says, and as he dictates, I write—

"This!" interjected Kennedy, eagerly holding up the letter that he had received from her.

Elaine looked it over with her drug-laden eyes. "Yes," she nodded, then lapsed again to the scene itself. "He reads it over, and as he does so says, 'Now, address an envelope. Himself he folds the letter, seals the envelope stamps it, and drops it into his pocket, hastily straightening the desk.

"Now go ahead of me—again

Leave the room—no, by the hall door. We are going back upstairs. I obey him, and at the door he switches off the lights. How I stand it I do not know. go upstairs mechanically into my own room—I and this masked man.

"Take on the kimono and slippers!" he orders. I do that. 'Get into bed!' he growls. I crawl in tearfully. For a moment he looks about—then goes out—with a look back as he goes. Oh! Oh! That hand—which he raises at me—THAT HAND!

The poor girl was sitting bolt upright, staring straight at the hall door, as we watched and listened, fascinated.

Kennedy was bending over, soothing her. She gave evidence of coming out from the effect of the drug. I noticed that Bennett had suddenly moved a step in the direction of the door at which she stared.

"By heavens!" he muttered, staring, too. "Look!"

We did look. A letter was slowly being inserted under the door.

I took a quick step forward. That moment I felt a rough tug at my arm, and a voice whispered: "Wait, you chump!"

It was Kennedy. He had whipped out his automatic and had carefully leveled it at the door. Before he could fire, however, Bennett had rushed ahead.

I followed. We looked down the hall. Sure enough, the figure of a man could be seen disappearing around an angle. I followed Bennett out of the door and down the hall.

"Words cannot keep pace with what followed. Together we rushed to the back stairs.

"Down there, while I go down the front!" cried Bennett.

I went down, and he turned and went down the other flight. As he did so Craig followed him.

Suddenly, in the drawing room, I bumped into a figure on the other side of the portieres. I seized him. We struggled. Rip! The portieres came down, covering me entirely. Over and over we went, smashing a lamp. It was vicious. Another man attacked me, too.

"I've got him—Kennedy!" I heard a voice pant over me.

A scream followed from Aunt Josephine. Suddenly the portieres were pulled off me.

"The deuce!" puffed Kennedy. "It's Jameson."

Bennett had rushed plump into me, coming the other way, hidden by the portieres!

If we had known at the time, our Michael of the sinister face had gained the library and was standing in the center of the room. He had heard me coming and had fled to the drawing room. As we finished our struggle in the library he rose hastily from behind the divan in the other room, where he had dropped, and had quietly and hastily disappeared through another door.

Laughing and breathing hard, they helped me to my feet. It was no joke to me. I was sore in every bone.

"Well, where did he go?" insisted Bennett.

"I don't know—perhaps back there," I cried.

Bennett and I argued a moment, then started and stopped short. Aunt Josephine had run downstairs and was now shoving the letter into Craig's hands.

We gathered about him curiously. He opened it. On it was that awesome Clutching Hand again.

Kennedy read it. For a moment he stood and studied it, then slowly crushed it in his hand.

Just then Elaine, pale and shaken from the ordeal she had voluntarily gone through, burst in upon us from upstairs. Without a word she advanced to Craig and took the letter from him.

Inside, as on the envelope, was that same signature of the Clutching Hand.

Elaine gazed at it, wild-eyed, then at Craig. Craig smilingly reached for the note, took it, folded it, and unconcernedly thrust it into his pocket.

"My God!" she cried, clasping her hands convulsively, and repeating the word of the letter, "YOUR LAST WARNING!"

DEATH OF MRS. ALLEN

Mrs. Luthera Child Allen, the widow of the late Isaac D. Allen, a former well known business man of Boston, died last Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles M. Howell of Elm road, Newtonville. Mrs. Allen, who has been a resident of Newtonville and of Newton for many years was 84 years of age. Besides Mrs. Howell, she is survived by three sons, Fred and Herbert Allen of Brookline and Harry Allen of Medford. Funeral services were held from her late residence on Wednesday afternoon and the interment was at the Newton Cemetery.

COST OF MILK PRODUCTION

From the standpoint of the public health no industry is of more importance than the milk industry which is also, in view of the extent to which the human infant is a parasite upon the cow, of very considerable proportions. It is surprising, therefore, to learn that milk producers frequently do not know the cost of production and distribution of the product they sell.

This appears to be true, at least, of milk producers around Boston. About 50 farmers who sell milk attended a hearing recently before a commission appointed by the Boston Chamber of Commerce to secure accurate information on the cost of production, transportation and distribution of milk. One farmer, who gets 40 cents a can for milk at his door, did not know how much it cost him. Not until last August did he begin keeping an account of cost, and he could not tell what profit he was making. Another man who was sure that he was making money did not know exactly how he stood financially. One farmer with fifteen cows on thirty acres, estimated that it cost sixty-two cents to produce ten quarts of milk, which he sells in Brockton to one hundred and twenty-five customers for nine and ten cents a quart. He did not know the cost of distribution, but estimating it at two cents a quart, his profit on each quart was figured at eight-tenths of a cent. An Auburn farmer with twenty cows, selling two-thirds of his milk at eleven cents a quart, said that there was no profit in the business, while a Norfolk man, with nine cows, doing all the work himself, is obliged to sell off a little lumber each year to make a living.

If the experience of these milk producers is typical, it would seem that a great many farmers do not know whether the business yields them a profit or a loss. If that is so, it would be to their advantage to acquire a little knowledge of bookkeeping in order to determine whether milk earns them money or costs them money. Of course, the general farmer with whom the production and sale of milk is only one of many activities, would find it hard to separate the milk department from the others. His cows serve a purpose other than that of furnishing milk, and all the activities of the farm are inextricably bound up together. At the same time, the farmers who sell milk, especially those who specialize in it and distribute their products, should know whether their venture is a profitable or a losing one.

In the last eight years in this city milk has gone up from six to nine cents a quart. This advance may be attributed in part to the increase in the cost of all articles, including labor, and in part to the regulations, ever growing stricter, of boards of health. Milk must be clean, and iced, and produced under certain conditions, all of which tend to make it cost more. Clearly, if we are to be sure of good milk, the producer must get for it a price which will yield him a decent profit, and any investigation which will help him to ascertain just what it does cost him to produce and distribute milk is well worth while.

OVERWORKING BABY

The quickest way to overwork your baby is to "amuse" him all day long when he is not sleeping. By keeping this up you will find it is one of the surest and quickest methods known for rearing a child in delicate health, irritable temper and shattered nerves. Babies do not have to be amused all day long. This is only a belief on the part of unthinking, fond mammas, and ignorant nurses. By starting in and amusing the baby throughout his waking hours he will soon get so that he will think he has to be amused and he will fret and cry for attention. Yet this same attention is nothing more or less than overwork and will surely ruin his disposition and injure his health.

I have seen babies who lived what must have been lives of torture. One in particular was dandled by his mother, tossed up in the air by his father, hugged and crooned over by his grandmother, "toted" around by his big sister and in the air or grabbing hold of his dress at his stomach and playfully shaking him as you would a puppy. You are abusing him, overworking him, and getting him so that he cannot be left alone a moment.

I do not mean to let the baby entertain himself alone. It is natural to want to play the baby, to pat his little hand, to play with his pink little toes, to take him out in your arms for a "walk" in the garden, and these things are all right in their way. It is the overdoing it that makes the trouble. If the right sort of a start is made, if baby is not tossed and mauled about all the time at the beginning, he will amuse himself far better than an adult can amuse him, and he will not cry so long as he is perfectly healthy, has dry clothes and is not hungry.—Safe Milk.

sion everywhere upon a decision so momentous. A subject of infinitely less importance, the permanent endowment of the Federation, was presented to the presidents' council at Salem as early as March so that all the clubs might discuss it and act upon it intelligently. But every suggestion of action on suffrage was deferred until nearly all the clubs had held their final meetings and club life for the year was practically over.

We would also point out that the statement of the council is quite misleading as to the character of the vote at Marion. The statement speaks of a vote of 203 to 99. This is correct, but looks very differently when it is understood that 95 members present did not vote, leaving a majority of only 9 of all delegates present.

The Non-Partisan Association of Club Women does not issue this statement in any partisan spirit, or with any thought of opposing suffrage, but simply and solely in the interests of the Women's Clubs of Massachusetts. Those clubs have a distinct function of their own and a broad field of usefulness, both social and humanitarian. There are a hundred objects crying for attention for which the clubs can work harmoniously, effectively, without controversy, or friction, or ill-feeling. On the other hand, those who are interested in burning political issues have organizations of their own in which they can work to far greater advantage. We believe that action like that taken at Marion must result in greatly impairing the usefulness of our clubs, if not in destroying them altogether, and we are content that we have the support of most of the club women of the state in our effort to avoid strife.

the Boston Congregational Club. The registrar and chairman of the attendance committee is Chester O. Dorchester, 40 Water street. The executive secretary is Charles C. Merrill, 14 Beacon street, who is New England secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, who has also been in charge of the work of this kind during the last year with Boston as a center. One aim of the movement is to stir up church members who have been inactive. Another aim is to have an attendance of at least 3000 at the meetings in Boston in November. Meantime, much work will be done to inform these men and the public of the large importance of the crisis in church and world affairs which demands the best that there is in every man.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Mr. Lewis Smith of the Evangelistic Association of New England will be the speaker next Sunday afternoon at the meeting on the Y. M. C. A. lawn at five o'clock. Mr. Smith is not only a gifted speaker but a fine singer and will sing several selections, playing his own accompaniment on the harp. The orchestra which has made the music so attractive will play again for us. Everyone will be welcome at this meeting.

The Deep Sea Fishing Trip which was to have been held on the 22nd of July has been postponed until August. Chase Kepner and Wm. F. Chase have reached the finals in the Tennis Tournament at the Y. M. C. A. As Mr. Kepner is away on his vacation the match to determine the championship of the Association will be played early in September.

If any of the friends who have so kindly contributed toward the outing of the boys from Boston chance to read these notes they will be glad to know of the many expressions of appreciation by the boys who have enjoyed these good times at the Association.

WANTED a teacher to take charge of an English speaking class for Italians which meets at the Y. M. C. A. on Monday and Friday evening. If anyone is interested to do this type of volunteer work please communicate with Mr. Bascom at once at the Y. M. C. A.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

By ARTHUR B. REEVE
The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Presented in Collaboration With the Pathe Players and the Eclectic Film Company

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders of prominent men. The principal clue to the murderer is the warning letter which is sent the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend, Jameson, a newspaper man.

THIRD EPISODE

The Vanishing Jewels.

Banging away at my typewriter the next day, in Kennedy's laboratory, I was startled by the sudden, insistent ringing of the telephone near me.

"Hello," I answered, for Craig was at work at his table, trying still to extract some clue from the slender evidence thus far elicited in the Dodge mystery.

"Oh, Mr. Kennedy," I heard an excited voice over the wire reply, "my friend, Susie Martin, is here. Her father has just received a message from that Clutching Hand and—"

"Just a moment, Miss Dodge," I interrupted. "This is Mr. Jameson."

"Oh!" came back the voice, breathless and disappointed. "Let me have Mr. Kennedy—quick."

I had already passed the telephone to Craig and was watching him keenly as he listened over it.

He motioned to me for a pad and pencil that lay near me.

"Please read the letter again, slower, Miss Dodge," he asked, adding, "there isn't time for me to see it—just yet. But I want it exactly. You say it is made up of separate words and type cut from newspapers and pasted on note paper?"

I handed him paper and pencil.

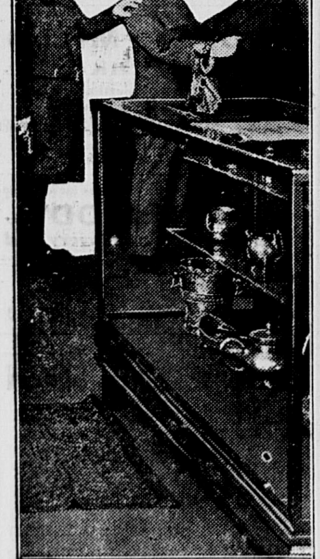

"All right, now, Miss Dodge, go ahead."

As he wrote he indicated to me by his eyes that he wanted me to read. I did so:

Sturtevant Martin, Jeweler,
No. 7394 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
Sir—As you have failed to deliver the $10,000, I shall rob your main diamond case at exactly noon today.

"Thank you, Miss Dodge," continued Kennedy, laying down the pencil.

"Yes, I understand perfectly—signed by that same Clutching Hand. Let me see," he pondered, looking at his watch. "It is now half-past eleven. Very well. I shall meet you and Miss

A Remarkable Scene Greeted Us.

Martin at Mr. Martin's store directly."

It lacked five minutes of noon when Kennedy and I dashed up before Martin's and dismissed our taxicab.

A remarkable scene greeted us as we entered the famous jewelry shop. Involuntarily I drew back. Squarely in front of us a man had suddenly raised a revolver and leveled it at us.

"Don't!" cried a familiar voice. "That is Mr. Kennedy!"

Just then, from a little knot of people, Elaine Dodge sprang forward with a cry and seized the gun.

Kennedy turned to her, apparently not half so much concerned about the automatic that yawned at him as about the anxiety of the pretty girl who had intervened. The too eager plain-clothes man lowered the gun sheepishly.

Sturtevant Martin was a typical society business man, quietly but richly dressed.

In the excitement I glanced about hurriedly.

Directly in front of me was a sign tacked up on a pillar, which read: "This store will be closed at noon today. Martin & Co."

All the customers were gone

Martin himself was evidently very nervous and very much alarmed. Indeed, no one could blame him for that. Merely to have been singled out by this amazing master criminal was enough to cause panic. Already he had engaged detectives, prepared for whatever might happen, and they had advised him to leave the diamonds in the counter, clear the store and let the crooks try anything, if they dared.

Just back of us, and around the corner, as we came in, we had noticed a limousine which had driven up. Three faultlessly attired dandies had entered a doorway down the street, as we learned afterward, apparently going to a fashionable tailor's which occupied the second floor of the old-fashioned building, the first floor having been renovated and made ready for renting. Had we been there a moment sooner we might have seen, I suppose, that one of them nodded to a taxicab driver, who was standing at a public hack stand a few feet up the block. The driver nodded unostentatiously back at the man.

In spite of the excitement, Kennedy quietly examined the showcase, which was, indeed, a veritable treasure store of brilliants.

Slowly the hands of the clock came nearer together at noon.

We all gathered about the showcase, with its glittering hoard of wealth, forming a circle at a respectable distance.

In deep-lunged tones the clock played the chords written, I believe, by Handel. Then it began striking. Nothing had happened.

We all breathed a sigh of relief. "Well, it is still there!" exclaimed Martin, pointing at the showcase with a forced laugh.

Suddenly came a rending and crashing sound. It seemed as if the very floor on which we stood was giving way.

The showcase, with all its priceless contents, went smashing into the cellar below.

The flooring beneath the case had been cut through!

All crowded forward, gazing at the black, yawning cavern.

Down below, three men, covered with smocks and their faces hidden by masks, had knocked the prop away from the ceiling of the cellar, which they had sawed almost through at their leisure, and the showcase had landed eight or ten feet below, shivered into a thousand bits.

A volley of shots whizzed past us and another. While one crook was hastily stuffing the untold wealth of jewels into a burlap bag the others had drawn revolvers and were firing up through the hole in the floor desperately.

"Look out!" cried someone behind us before we could recover from our first surprise and return the fire.

One of the desperadoes had taken a bomb from under his smock, lighted it and thrown it up through the hole in the floor.

It sailed up over our heads and landed near our little group, on the floor, the fuse sputtering ominously.

I heard an exclamation of fear from Elaine.

Kennedy had pushed his way past us and picked up the deadly infernal machine in his bare hands.

I watched him, fascinated. As near as he dared, he approached the hole in the floor, still holding the thing off at arm's length. Would he never throw it?

He was coolly holding it, allowing the fuse to burn down closer to the explosion point.

It was now within less than an inch of sure death.

Suddenly he raised it and hurled the deadly thing down through the hole.

We could hear the imprecations of the crooks as it struck the cellar floor, near them.

"Leave the store—quick!" rang out Kennedy's voice.

Down below the crooks were beating a hasty retreat through a secret entrance which they had effected.

"The bag! The bag!" we could hear one of them bellow.

"The bomb—run!" cried another voice gruffly.

The explosion that followed lifted us fairly off our feet.

As the smoke from the explosion cleared away, Kennedy could be seen, the first to run forward.

Meanwhile Martin's detectives had rushed down a flight of back stairs that led into a coal cellar. With coal shovels and bars, anything they could lay hands on, they attacked the door that opened forward from the coal cellar into the front basement where the robbers had been.

A moment Kennedy and Bennett paused on the brink of the abyss which the bomb had made, waiting for the smoke to decrease. Then they began to climb down cautiously over the piled-up wreckage.

The explosion had set the basement afire, but the fire had not gained much headway by the time they reached the basement. Quickly Kennedy ran to the door into the coal cellar and opened it.

the powerful limousine. On uptown they went, the only thing preventing the limousine from escaping being the fear of pursuit by traffic police if the driver let out speed. They were content to manage to keep just far enough ahead to be out of danger of having Kennedy overhaul them. As for us, we followed as best we could, on uptown, past the city line, and out into the country.

There Kennedy lost sight altogether of the car he was trailing. Worse than that, we lost sight of Kennedy. Still we kept on blindly, trusting to luck and common sense in picking the road.

I was peering ahead over the driver's shoulder, the window down, trying to direct him, when we approached a fork in the road. Here was a dilemma which must be decided at once, rightly or wrongly.

As we neared the crossroad I gave an involuntary exclamation. Beside the road, almost on it, lay the figure of a man. Our driver pulled up with a jerk and I was out of the car in an instant.

There lay Kennedy! Someone had blackjacked him. He was groaning, just beginning to show signs of consciousness as I bent over.

"What's the matter, old man?" I asked, helping him to his feet.

He looked about dazed a moment, then seeing me and comprehending, he pointed excitedly, but vaguely.

"Elaine!" he cried. "They've kidnapped Elaine!"

What had really happened, as we learned later from Elaine and others, was that when the crossroads was reached the three crooks in the limousine had stopped long enough to speak to an accomplice stationed there, according to their plan for a getaway. He was a tough-looking individual who might have been hobnobbing to the city.

When, a few minutes later, Kennedy and Elaine had approached the fork, their driver had slowed up, as if Elaine, equal to anything, did so, and Craig bent down and cranked the engine. It started on the first spin.

"See!" he exclaimed. "There wasn't anything after all."

He took a step toward the taxicab. "Mr. Kennedy—look out!" cried Elaine.

Craig turned. But it was too late. The rough-looking fellow had awakened to life. Suddenly he stepped up behind Kennedy with a blackjack. As the heavy weight descended Craig crumpled up on the ground unconscious.

With a scream, Elaine turned and started to run. But the chauffeur seized her arm.

"Say, bo," he asked of the rough fellow, "what does Clutching Hand want with her? Quick! There's another cab likely to be along in a moment with that fellow Jameson in it."

The rough fellow, with an oath, seized her and dragged her into the taxicab. "Go ahead!" he growled, indicating the road.

And away they sped, leaving Kennedy unconscious on the side of the road, where we found him.

"What are we to do?" I asked helplessly of Kennedy, when we had at last got him on his feet.

His head still ringing from the force of the blow of the blackjack, Craig stooped down, then knelt in the dust of the road, then ran ahead a bit, where it was somewhat muddy.

"Which way—which way?" he muttered to himself.

I thought perhaps the blow had affected him and leaned over to see what he was doing. Instead, he was studying the marks made by the tire of the Clutching Hand cab.

More slowly now and carefully, we proceeded, for a mistake meant losing the trail of Elaine.

We came to another crossroads and the driver glanced at Craig. "Stop!" he ordered.

In another instant he was down in the dirt, examining the road for marks.

"That way!" he indicated, leaping back to the running board.

We piled back into the car and proceeded under Kennedy's direction, as fast as he would permit. So it continued, perhaps for a couple of hours.

At last Kennedy stopped the cab and slowly directed the driver to veer into an open space that looked particularly lonesome. Near it stood a one-story brick factory building, closed, but not abandoned.

As I looked about at the unattractive scene, Kennedy already was down on his knees in the dirt again, studying the tire tracks. They were all confused, showing that the taxicab we were following had evidently backed in and turned several times before going on.

"Crossed by another set of tire tracks!" he exclaimed excitedly, studying closer. "That must have been the limousine, waiting."

Laboriously he was following the course of the cars in the open space, when one word escaped him. "Footprints!"

He was up and off in a moment, before we could imagine what he was after. We had got out of the cab, and followed him as, down to the very shore of a sort of cove or bay, he went. There lay a rusty, discarded boiler on the beach, half submerged in the rising tide. At this tank the footprints seemed to go right down the sand and into the waves, which were slowly obliterating them.

Kennedy gazed out as if to make out a possible boat on the horizon where the cove widened out.

"Look!" I cried.

Further down the shore, a few feet, I had discovered the same prints, going in the opposite direction, back toward the place from which he had just come. I started to follow them but soon found myself alone. Kennedy had paused beside the old boiler.

"What is it?" I asked, retracing my steps.

He did not answer, but seemed to be listening. We listened also. There certainly was a most peculiar noise inside that tank.

Was it a muffled scream? Kennedy reached down and picked up a rock, hitting the tank with a resounding blow. As the echo died down, he listened again.

Yes, there was a sound—a scream, perhaps—a woman's voice, faint but unmistakable.

I looked at his face inquiringly. Without a word I read in it the confirmation of the thought that had flashed into my mind.

Elaine Dodge was inside!

First had come the limousine, with its three handits, to the spot fixed on as a rendezvous. Later had come the taxicab. As it drove into sight, the three well-dressed crooks had drawn revolvers, thinking perhaps the plan for getting rid of Kennedy might possibly have miscarried. But the taxicab driver and the rough-faced fellow had reassured them with the sign of the Clutching Hand, and the revolvers were lowered.

As they parleyed hastily, the roughneck and the fake chauffeur lifted Elaine out of the taxi. She was bound and gagged.

"Well, now we've got her, what shall we do with her?" asked one.

"It's got to be quick. There's another cab," put in the driver.

"The deuce with that,"

"The deuce with nothing," he returned. "That fellow Kennedy's a clever one. He may come to. If he does, he won't miss us. Quick, now!"

"See," cried the third. "See that old boiler down there at the edge of the water? Why not put her in there? No one'll ever think to look in such a place."

With a hasty expression of approval, the roughneck picked Elaine up bodily, still struggling vainly, and together they carried her, bound and gagged, to the tank. The opening, which was toward the water, was small, but they managed, roughly, to thrust her in.

A moment later and they had rolled up a huge boulder against the small entrance, bracing it so that it would be impossible for her to get out from the inside. Then they drove off hastily.

Frankly Elaine managed to loosen the gag. She screamed. Her voice seemed to be bound around by the iron walls as she was herself. She shuddered. The water was rising—had reached her chest, and was still rising, slowly, inexorably.

"What was that? Silence? Or was someone outside?"

Coolly, in spite of the emergency, Kennedy took in the perilous situation.

The lower end of the boiler, which was on a slant on the rapidly shelving beach, was now completely under water and impossible to get at. Besides, the opening was small, too small.

Kennedy gazed about frantically and his eye caught the sign on the factory:

OXYACETYLENE WELDING CO.

"Come, Walter," he cried, running up the shore.

A moment later, breathless, we reached the doorway. It was, of course, locked. Kennedy whipped out his revolver and several well-directed shots through the keyhole smashed the lock. We put our shoulders to it and swung the door open, entering the factory.

Beside a work bench stood two long cylinders, studded with bolts.

"That's what I'm looking for," exclaimed Craig. "Here, Walter, take one. I'll take the other—and the tubes—and—"

"We ran, for there was no time to lose. As nearly as I could estimate it, the water must now be slowly closing over Elaine."

"What is it?" I asked, as he joined up the tubes from the tanks to the peculiar hooklike apparatus he carried.

"An oxyacetylene blowpipe," he muttered back feverishly. "Used for welding and cutting, too," he added.

With a light he touched the nozzle, instantly a hissing, blinding flame made the steel heat from one descent. The terrific heat from the nozzle made the steel glow. The stream of oxygen from the second completely consumed the hot metal.

Kennedy was actually cutting out a huge hole in the still exposed surface of the tank—all around, except for a few inches, to prevent the heavy piece from falling inward.

As Kennedy carefully bent outward the section of the tank which he had cut, he quickly reached down and lifted Elaine, unconscious, out of the water.

Gently he laid her on the sand. It was the work of only a moment to cut the cords that bound her hands.

There she lay, pale and still. Was she dead?

Kennedy worked frantically to revive her.

At last, slowly, the color seemed to return to her pale lips. Her eyelids fluttered. Then her great, deep eyes opened.

As she looked up and caught sight of Craig bending anxiously over her, she seemed to comprehend. For a moment both were silent. Then Elaine reached up and took his hand.

"Craig," she whispered, "you—you've saved my life!"

Her tone was eloquent.

"Elaine," he whispered, still gazing down into her wonderful eyes, "the Clutching Hand shall pay for this! It is a fight to a finish between us!"

TO BE CONTINUED.

Kennedy Quietly Examined the Showcase.

In doubt which way to go, Craig had stuck his head out of the window, as I had done, and, seeing the crossroads, had told the chauffeur to stop. There stood the hobo.

"Did a car pass here, just now—a big car?" called Craig.

The man put his hand to his ear, as if only half comprehending.

"Which way did the big car go?" repeated Kennedy.

The hobo approached the taxicab sullenly, as if he had a grudge against cars in general.

One question after another elicited little that could be construed as intelligence. If Craig had only been able to see, he would have found out that, with his back toward the taxicab driver, the hobo held one hand behind him and made the sign of the Clutching Hand, glancing surreptitiously at the driver to catch the answering sign, while Craig gazed earnestly up the two roads.

At last Craig gave him up as hopeless. "Well—go ahead—that way," he indicated, picking the most likely road.

As the chauffeur was about to start he stalled his engine.

"Hurry!" urged Craig, exasperated at the delays.

The driver got out and tried to crank the engine. Again and again he turned it over, but somehow it refused to start. Then he lifted the hood and began to tinkler.

"What's the matter?" asked Craig, impatiently jumping out and bending over the engine, too.

The driver shrugged his shoulders. "Must be something wrong with the ignition, I guess," he replied.

Kennedy looked the car over hastily. "I can't see anything wrong," he frowned.

"Well, there is," growled the driver. Precious minutes were speeding away as they argued. Finally with his characteristic energy, Kennedy put the taxicab driver aside.

"Let me try it," he said. "Miss Dodge, will you arrange that spark and throttle?"

He did not answer, but seemed to be listening. We listened also. There certainly was a most peculiar noise inside that tank.

Was it a muffled scream? Kennedy reached down and picked up a rock, hitting the tank with a resounding blow. As the echo died down, he listened again.

POLICE NOTES

Louis F. Gibbons, 22, of 208 Washington avenue, Chelsea, was in the Police Court yesterday morning before Judge J. C. Kennedy on the charge of larceny of about $22 from the Edison Electric Illuminating Company. When first arraigned the young man entered a plea of guilty and the case was put over to allow Inspector Edward P. O'Halloran an opportunity to look up the life of the defendant. Judge Kennedy dwelt a long time on the case, giving the young man a lot of advice and before disposing of the case asked Inspector O'Halloran what he could suggest that might help the future of Gibbons. On the suggestion of the inspector Gibbons was given a suspended sentence of two months in the House of Correction, with the understanding that he keep in close touch with the Newton police officials.

Albert Palmer, 18, of 15 Naples road, Brookline, was fined $4 yesterday morning on the charge of operating a bicycle on the highways of Newton without a light. The young man was summoned into court Wednesday and on his failure to appear a warrant for his arrest was issued. He paid the fine.

Old Time Detective Work

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

I have been a detective for many years, though now that I am getting old I seldom take a case, and then only one that promises to interest me. My leisure time I spend in study. And what do you suppose is the subject of my studies? I will tell you. I am searching the past when there were no detectives that I may learn how criminals were traced.

I have found a succession of conditions, beginning with confession by torture—to this may be added confession by influence of the clergy—and ending with our present highly perfected detective system. I regret to say that there still exists one relic of the practice of obtaining confessions by influence of the clergy. I refer to securing them by means of the "third degree."

A curious instance of confession I have found in a record of the latter part of the eighteenth century.

During the year 1790 an altercation occurred between James Thorpe and Pardon Winston in Bradford, a small town in Massachusetts. Robert Thorpe, a brother of James, came on to the scene while the fight was in progress and struck Winston on the head with a piece of wood, knocking him senseless. However, he revived in a few minutes, and the brothers, who had been friends of Winston, frightened lest he had been killed, assisted him to his home, expressing great regret at the occurrence.

Winston did not seem any the worse for the blow he had received and remained in Bradford some time after the scuffle. But one day he was missed, and, when months passed and he did not show up, among the various causes for his disappearance that were suggested was one that the quarrel between him and the Thorpe brothers had been renewed and the missing man had come to his death through their instrumentality.

However, since there was nothing but inference in the matter, the suspicion died down. Several years after Winston's disappearance Abner Twitchell, a citizen of Bradford, dreamed one night that the ghost of Winston had appeared to him and said that the Thorpe brothers had killed him, burned his body and buried the residue under a beech tree, the only tree standing in the back yard of his home. Twitchell gave the civil authorities an account of his dream.

At this point in my narrative it is well to remember the conditions of that period. The belief in witchcraft that had reaped so many victims had died out among educated persons, but still prevailed among the lower classes. Today a belief in revelation by dreams, though not what it was then, is not entirely extinct.

The Thorpe brothers were arrested, the ground about the roots of the beech tree was dug up, and some buttons and the metal parts of a pair of suspenders were found. This evidence was considered so strong that the Thorpe brothers were urged to confess in order that justice should be meted out to each in accordance with what he deserved. James, under the incessant pleadings of his spiritual adviser, finally gave way and confessed that he had been the murderer. But later Robert confessed that he, too, had taken part in the killing and had done the principal part in getting rid of the body.

Now, if we consider the evidence in this case as it would be regarded today there is nothing in it. First, we would not accept the dream as of any value whatever; second, the articles found under the beech tree might have been thrown out in the yard or burned with other refuse under the tree and become mingled with the soil; third, we have numerous confessions in murder cases that are not true.

But in those days, when the people were emerging from a period wherein an organized court of justice would convict a woman of vomiting crooked pins and sailing on the water in a sieve, the evidence against the Thorpe brothers, backed by the confession of both, was considered quite sufficient to hang them. They were tried, convicted and sentenced.

One day a man rode into Bradford and while sitting around the tavern stove was told that the next day there would be a hanging in the town and he had better remain over and see it. On mention of the name of Winston he said that he had seen a half-witted man in Hadley of that name. A friend of the Thorpe boys was present, and he went to the judge with the story, asking for a stay of the execution in order that the matter might be investigated.

A constable was sent to Hadley and returned with the man for whose murder the prisoners were to have been hanged. The brothers were released and received an ovation, the townspeople really rejoicing that they had been saved by a mere chance from having committed murder themselves.

The blow that Winston had received from Robert Thorpe had caused an inflammation of a bit of his skull on the brain. Even nowadays we are never sure when or what vagaries may be caused by such a pressure, though it can now be removed by surgeons. Whether the surgical process of trepanning was done in those days or not I don't know. I found no record of the subsequent condition of the injured man.

names. A stringent law placed on the statute books a few years ago, provides a heavy penalty for anyone who attempts to influence any registrar while performing this duty. In Newton it is the custom for the registrars to apportion to each precinct its share of the total number of names, and then go over each precinct list eliminating the name of every voter who is exempt from jury service by law, and the exemptions are many and varied. The names remaining are placed on separate slips of paper, placed in a box and drawn out, one by one until the quota for that particular precinct has been completed. The names so selected are placed in the jury box on separate slips of paper and when a venire is issued by the court, the required number of names is drawn from this box by the board of aldermen.

The city clerk is also required to record such papers as mortgages or personal property, certificates of married women doing business on their own account, the names of persons doing business under titles other than their own assignments of wages and bills of sale. All of these are carefully copied, and indexed.

He is also the agent of the board of aldermen for the distribution of Soldiers' Relief, a gratuity required by law to old soldiers and their widows, and which cannot be made by the Charity department. In this connection he is also the agent of the board of aldermen for the burial of deceased soldiers, who would otherwise be buried as paupers.

The city clerk also has the duty of providing for the printing of the annual reports of the various departments of the city and for all the printing required by the board of aldermen, amounting in 1914 to over $2300.

From all of the above it is easy to prove the statement made at the beginning of this article that the city clerk comes in contact with every citizen from the cradle to the grave. He first notes the birth, issues the certificate of marriage, notes the birth of the children, issues the licenses for many kinds of business, which he may require, dog licenses if he keeps such a pet, a hunter's license if he inclines in that direction, provides for registration as a voter, and makes arrangements for him to exercise his rights of franchise, gives him notice of street, sidewalk or sewer improvements in his neighborhood, and finally records his death. No other office of the city, therefore, so closely touches the daily life of every man as that of the city clerk.

Lightship No. 4

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

One day thirty years ago it was reported to the Trinity board, which has charge of all lights on the coast of Great Britain, that a shoal had made in the English channel about nine miles due east of the Lizard. At the spot indicated there had been thirty fathoms of water ever since a British ship went to sea, and the board, of course, argued that there had been a mistake. It was a fishing craft which had reported the shoal and found only fourteen feet of water over it, and a craft was sent out at once to make an official investigation. What had happened was this: It was a boulder strewn bottom, and two or three old wrecks had drifted together and piled up on each other until a dangerous obstruction had been formed. It was as if a great rock had been heaved up from the bottom, and the board must guard against the danger without delay.

Thirty years ago the diver's dress was not what it is today, nor could men handle explosives under water as they can now. After two or three vain attempts to clear away the wrecks the work was left for a storm to accomplish, and meanwhile lightship No. 4, under Captain Crox, was moved around from Mounts bay and anchored near the spot and notice given to mariners.

That night it was the captain's watch from 8 till midnight. A gale had come up. It had come 10 o'clock when a sudden hail reached the lightship. The captain was aft and his mate forward, but he knew at once that the hail came from seaward. It was not so dark but that one could see a ship 300 feet away, even though she had no lights aboard.

As soon as a port fire was ignited the sea was lighted up for hundreds of feet around in a ghastly way, and both men looked for the craft they supposed to be near by. They looked in vain till the signal was nearly finished. Then a ship's yawl, driving right up in the teeth of the gale, hove into sight. She was without a mast or sail or oars, and the only figure in her sat in the stern sheets, and his arms and legs were bound around with ropes.

The man was bareheaded and dressed as a landsman, and as he drove past within twenty feet of the raft they had a look square into his eyes, and the agony on his face made them shudder. They started to throw him a rope, but as the coil swung into the air they remembered that, being bound, he could make no use of it. The yawl and the man went straight to windward and in a couple of minutes were out of sight, and the men found themselves all a-tremble. Captain Crox was full of indignation over the crime of sending a man afloat in that manner and of pity for the victim, when his mate touched him on the arm and shouted in his ear:

"If I was ashore, captain, all the money in England would not bribe me to set foot on this deck again!"

"What's the matter with you?" was called in reply. "It's only a bit of shore villainy that we must report."

"It's nothing that's happened ashore, sir. Did you take notice that the craft was driving right in the teeth of the gale? It wasn't a live man in that boat. She was going to windward with a ghost, and I'd give the bit I have in the bank if I'd not seen it."

It was agreed between them that nothing be said to the other watch when they turned out, and they went on duty without knowing or suspecting that anything out of the way had happened.

While carrying the thing out with pretended indifference, Captain Crox was, as a matter of fact, pretty thoroughly upset over it and on turning in found he could not go to sleep. He had been lying on his bunk and turning the thing over in his mind for an hour or so and the gale was still howling and the lightship bouncing about when he realized from the movement of the watch that they had been hailed. He was out of his bunk and on deck just as one of them lighted a port fire, and you can judge his feelings when he saw the former scene re-enacted. There were the yawl and the man, and the boat slowly forged past them and disappeared to windward.

There was no more sleep for anybody on board No. 4 that night, and next day, when the gale broke and the tender came alongside, all demanded that they be put ashore at once. The captain was as badly rattled as the others. They were guyed and ridiculed, of course, but they stood so firm that the tender brought off another crew, and they were relieved from duty. A new crew was assigned, but the man and the boat appeared to them twice in one night and drove them ashore, as they did the others.

A third crew went out and for two weeks began to prepare to remove the wrecks. Some progress had been made when a three days' gale set in from the north, and there were more wrecks than had been known for ten years before. For two days the lightship hung to her anchors, though having a signal of distress out after the first day, but when the gale abated she had disappeared. She had been swept down the channel and out to sea, and a week later she was passed bottom up more than 300 miles away. The same storm broke up and removed the wrecks, and there was no longer need to keep a light at that spot.

DEATH OF FATHER DOLAN

Best Priest in the City Passes Away at the Age of 81 Years

Rev. Michael Dolan, the permanent pastor of the Church of Our Lady at Newton, and its pastor for the past sixteen years, died early Monday morning at the rectory at the age of 81 years. Father Dolan, who is the oldest priest in the Archdiocese of Boston, has been in feeble health for some time but was not seriously ill until Saturday. He rallied from the attack, but had a relapse on the following Wednesday from which he did not recover.

land to be utilized for a school and convent and land in Needham for cemetery purposes. During his pastorate at Upper Falls, Father Dolan interested himself in the religious life at Newton Lower Falls and built St. John's Church in that village. In 1885, Father Dolan was transferred to his present pastorate at the Church of Our Lady and the past thirty years bear ample testimony to his administration. During this time he has built the present church rectory, paid off the ther Dolan has been one of the best in the religious life of this city, having been rector of St. Mary's Church at Newton Upper Falls for sixteen years previous to his appointment to his present pastorate. He was in County Cavan, Ireland on July 14, 1834, coming to this country with his parents, who settled in Lowell. He graduated from the School of that city and then joined with the Sulpician Fathers at Montreal, graduating in 1855. He went to St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, Md., and was ordained as a priest in that city in June 1868. He was first appointed an assistant in the Peter and Paul Church of South Boston and became rector of St. Mary's Church at Newton Upper Falls in 1871. Father Dolan enlarged this church to seating capacity of 1000 constructed adjacent to the building and secured debt on the church edifice, erected six marble altars, three in lower floor and three in the main auditorium, constructed the facade of three Gothic porches on the front of the church building, and thoroughly renovated the interior. Father Dolan's greatest work, however, was the establishment of the parish school and convent adjoining the church on Adams street. To this he devoted many years and it stands as a monument to his thoughtfulness and foresightedness. Some ten years ago, Archbishop Williams appointed him as permanent rector of the church, which under his able management has taken a foremost place among the church properties in the Archdiocese of Boston. Wednesday afternoon, the body was taken from the rectory into the church edifice, escorted by twenty priests of

THE 1915 CENSUS

Newton With A Population of 42,929 Shows Substantial Growth

The State Census Bureau has recently given out an unofficial and unverified statement of the census of the cities of the Commonwealth from which we take the following figures:

Ward 1	5,767
Ward 2	7,867
Ward 3	4,683
Ward 4	6,984
Ward 5	6,907
Ward 6	3,889
Ward 7	42,929

These figures indicate that the city has made a gain of 3,123 over the national census figures of 1910 which were 39,806. The 1910 figures by wards were as follows:

Ward 1	5,364
Ward 2	7,261
Ward 3	4,400
Ward 4	4,251
Ward 5	6,856
Ward 6	3,367
Ward 7	3,307
Total	39,806

Wards 3 and 4 make exactly the same gain, 432. Ward 2 with 606 being the heaviest gain and ward 5 with 128 being the lightest. Figured on the percentage basis, ward 7 with an increase of 17% leads the entire city, ward 4 with 10% being second, while ward 5 has the smallest per cent of gain with but 1 and 6-10.

DEATH OF MR. GAW

Mr. John W. Gaw, a life long resident of this city, died last Sunday at his home on Auburndale avenue, West Newton, after a short illness with pneumonia. Mr. Gaw was taken ill at his summer home in Beachmont and brought home last Saturday. He was 58 years of age, and for more than 25 years had been employed by the firm of Brown, Durrell & Co., as a shipper. He is survived by a widow, three daughters, Mrs. Joseph Curran, Mrs. Cornelius M. McCarthy, and Miss Alice Gaw, and one son, Mr. George Gaw. High requiem mass was celebrated on Tuesday morning at St. Bernard's Church and the interment was at Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

MUSICAL

A delightful musical was given last Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Charles D. Pickard, Berkeley place, Auburndale. Over seventy were present. The program was rendered by Mr. Albert Stoessel, violinist, assisted by Miss Marion Chapin, pianist. Mr. Stoessel is considered the most talented of the younger musicians of Berlin and in the last two years has become widely known as an ensemble player of unusual merit, being a member of the celebrated Willy Hess Quartette, and also a soloist of undeniable genius. His friends hope to have the privilege of hearing him many times this coming winter.

How Our Fire Losses Appear to English Eyes

President William J. Cozens of the Newton Board of Trade has recently received the following interesting letter from his brother in England, upon whom, it is evident, the subject of fire prevention has made a deep impression.

68 Margate Rd., Ramsgate, July 4, 1915.

Thanks for THE NEWTON GRAPHIC of 18th ult. As the oldest agent for the Northern Fire Assurance Co. of London and Aberdeen and a builder of houses for the same period of 35 years, the speech on Fire Prevention by Mr. Goddard to your Board of Trade has a peculiar fascination for me—it certainly is exactly to the point. Now what are you going to do in the matter? Does it simply end with the address and fall flat, or do you take smart action?

On the same page as the speech is a bold advertisement by a builder offering roofs of five kinds—"tin, copper, slate, shingle and paper." Have you no building By-Laws? Here we are not allowed to construct walls, or roof them over, with any combustible material. In the above list it looks as though the roofing materials were put in the order of cost and slate comes naturally in the middle. Tin and Copper are excellent, but cost too much except for public buildings. Shingles and paper ought to be prohibited with in at least 100 ft. of the nearest neighbor's land, whether built on or not. Oak shingles are occasionally used for church spires in this country, but they are said to be non inflammable, and I have never heard of such a roof taking fire. They are too expensive for dwelling houses, and would not be allowed by our Borough Surveyors. Pine shingles might be treated with a fire proof solution, but this is not satisfactory, as the effect volatilizes in time, and renewals would be neglected. I am astounded at Mr. Goddard's statements, that in such an advanced country as the U. S. people pay fire insurance premiums "many times the rates abroad." He goes on to affirm that every other fire in your country is caused by carelessness. From what I read between the lines, at least a further twenty five per cent of your fire would be through the carelessness of your officials, in not making proper building By-Laws. About 30 years ago here, the law compelled us to build a nine inch brick wall between every house or cottage, and run it up twelve inches above the roof, but these walls were such a source of damp in top bedrooms that about 10 years later it was decreed that the walls need not go through the roof, but must go up tight to the slates or tiles, and no roof timbers nor boarding were to come in contact from one tenement to another. This seems to be satisfactory and fairly fireproof. It is always better for roofs to be covered with the roof, unprotected gable walls soon give trouble inside and out through the damp.

Here we are fined if a chimney catches fire, no excuse will do for forgetting to call the sweep. Our By-Laws provide that no timber shall come nearer a flue than nine inches, that hearth trimmers shall be eighteen inches from the chimney breast, that fireplaces shall have a brick back nine inches thick. There cannot well be evasion here, for we have to notify the local surveyor before work is begun, he inspects as it proceeds, and the house may not be inhabited until the same surveyor gives his certificate of completion in accordance with the By-Laws. Any evasion or line for evasion (Continued on Page 8)

DEATH OF MR. BUSH

Engaged in Livery Business in Newton for Over Forty Years

Mr. George W. Bush, for over forty years engaged in business in this city, died last Friday at Centre Harbor, N. H. where he had been passing the summer. Mr. Bush has been in poor health for the past three years but was not taken seriously ill until a short time before his death. He was born in New Braintree, Mass. on Dec. 26, 1845 and came to Newton in 1870 and established a livery stable on land now occupied by the Channing Church. Later he removed to Elmwood street, where he engaged in the stable and undertaking business for many years. A short time ago he sold his livery business but continued as an undertaker. He was a member of Dalhousie lodge of Masons, of Newton Lodge, A. O. U. W. and of the Newton Board of Trade. Mr. Bush married Miss Martha P. Rich of North Brookfield and is survived by her and two daughters, Mrs. Harry E. Tucker of Turner's Falls, Mass. and Miss Bertha M. Bush of Newton and a granddaughter Marion L. Tucker.

Funeral services were held at his late home on Elmwood street, Newton, on Monday afternoon and were largely attended by friends and business associates. Rev. H. Grant Person, pastor of Eliot church officiated and the Mendelssohn quartet sang "Lead Kindly Light," "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "Abide with Me." During the services the stores in the village were closed as a mark of respect. The remains were cremated at Mt. Auburn Cemetery and the ashes buried at the Newton Cemetery.

POLICE NOTES

Fred Swett of Somerville, who has been operating a small touring car as a jitney bus between Nonantum square, Newton, and Waltham, was summoned into court yesterday for violating a city ordinance by setting up, using and operating a hackney carriage as a public conveyance without having the necessary permit from the Board of Aldermen. He pleaded not guilty. Judge Kennedy imposed a fine of $15 and Swett appealed, bonds being placed at $100. His defense was the same as that induced by the Waltham Auto Bus Company, representatives of which were fined several days ago at Newton and appealed.

BRAE BURN CLUB

The members of the Harvard Club enjoyed their annual outing last week on Wednesday at the Club. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Akeroyd of Newton Centre were registered at Brae Burn for the summer season. Mr. J. F. Fahrenstock, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, and Mr. Samuel Roland of Baltimore, were entertained at the Club last week by Mr. Charles F. Nye. The employees of the club enjoyed a golf tournament last week on Brae Burn Links, and Mr. Charles Kelley scored 80. Mr. Alfred Dahlstrom has gone on a two weeks' vacation trip to New Hampshire.

TAX RATE IS $18.50

Substantial Increase in Both Real and Personal Valuations Lowers the 1914 Rate by Thirty Cents

The board of assessors announced this morning that the tax rate for the year will be $18.50 per $1000, a reduction of thirty cents from the 1914 rate of $18.80. This pleasing result is obtained by finding a large increase in the valuations, both personal and real. While it was known that there was considerable activity in building the past year, it was the general impression that on account of the condition of the stock market that personal property would continue the slump which marked the 1914 situation. It is gratifying to note, therefore, that there is a substantial increase in the total personality.

The comparative figures which follow will give the facts more in detail.

WASH MILK BOTTLES

Bottles left unwashed by the consumer or collected by dealers when they have not been cleaned are known to be a menace to the public health and are no longer to be tolerated. Many instances of unwashed bottles being left by housewives and collected by milkmen have come to notice and housewives and dealers both are liable to prosecution for such action. "A milk bottle should be rinsed out immediately after the milk is removed," said Physician Mann. "If the milk is allowed to dry on the sides of the bottle and the bottle is allowed to stand, no system of washing used will make it sterile. The bottle should be sterilized. "Some milk dealers purchase bottles which have laid in the filth and dirt for weeks' give them a wash, which does not kill the germs they contain and they are then filled with milk and distributed to the consumers."

EDITORIAL

It is fortunate for the city that the order for $2000 to establish a Bureau of Markets in this city failed of passage at the midsummer meeting of our city government, for it would seem as if a second, sober thought would bring a majority, at least, of our board of aldermen, to realize the apparently unlimited expense to which this movement would lead.

Heretofore when a new department has been established in this city the utmost consideration has been given it from every point of view, including a definite statement of the work to be done, some idea of the person to be appointed as head of the department and the salary to be paid. The Market Bureau has not had that consideration. Its duties are extremely vague, the amount to be paid its head is uncertain albeit $3600 has been suggested, and it is not even known that a suitable person can be secured. While it may be wise to authorize the appointment of such a department head at a salary exceeding that paid to such important officials as our City Clerk, Water, Buildings and Forest Commissioners, the Chiefs of our Fire and Police departments, and to equal that paid our City Engineer and City Solicitor, there is certainly reason to ask that it should only be done after the most careful investigation of the matter and a clear understanding of its necessity and scope.

It might be well for the aldermen to satisfy themselves, for instance, as to whether our local marketmen would patronize the proposed wholesale market it is proposed to establish; whether it would be any improvement over the present daily delivery of fresh vegetables direct to the stores in this city; why Waltham stores (where no public market exists) can sell at a cheaper price than Newton merchants, and whether there is any difference in the quality of the goods sold.

The editor of the GRAPHIC has had some acquaintance with Newton markets during the past thirty years and is not ready to admit that prices in this city when quality is compared with the same quality, are greatly in excess of what is paid in other places.
There is nothing gained by comparing the prices paid for the highest quality here with that paid for second or third rate stuff elsewhere, and yet, that is what the advocates of this proposition are attempting to put over on our city government. The chain grocery and the butter and egg stores in Newton sell their products at exactly the same prices as charged in other communities, and it is evident that the determining factor is quality, not location.
It is also evident that the proposed market would only be available during the months when the surrounding farms were producing their market truck and that as soon as the season was over, the market must depend upon the Boston market for its supplies and would thus add another handing to the produce so marketed.
The whole movement is chimerical, sustained by the zeal and enthusiasm of one young man, whose practical knowledge of conditions in this city is very slight, and it can not stand the cold common sense of practical business men.

It is impossible to measure by any human standards the work done along religious and educational lines by the late Father Dolan, who for nearly a half century has labored in this city.
Buildings of brick and stone indicate some material progress, but the impressions made on thousands of human minds and souls cannot be estimated.
Father Dolan was a man of great executive ability, the church, rectory, convent and school, bear ample witness to that fact. But it is in the more intimate contact with the spiritual life of his people that his memory will be regarded with the greatest love, and his example and precepts will bear the greatest fruit.

The reduction of the tax rate by thirty cents is a cause of congratula-tion under present conditions, for higher state expenses and low prices on stocks and bonds had led many to predict that the Newton rate would have to advance. The increase in personal valuation is gratifying, if it has not been obtained by "boosting" individual tax payers, and this cannot be known until the tax bills are out. The great increase in real estate shows that Newton is building up in a most rapid manner and creates a permanent value for future years.

The high cost of living has been responsible for many political nostrums, let us hope that it will not be responsible for unwise socialistic experiments.

ARE WOMEN PEOPLE?

The most delightful of all the new books on equal suffrage is Alice Duer Miller's "Are Women People?" The author calls it "a book of rhymes for suffrage times," but it contains prose as well, and the prose is as brilliant as the verse. Here is a sample:

Why We Oppose Women Travelling in Railway Trains

1. Because traveling in trains is not a natural right.
2. Because our great-grandfathers never asked to travel in trains.
3. Because woman's place is in the home, not the train.
4. Because it is unnecessary; there is no point reached by a train that cannot be reached on foot.

5. Because it will double the work of conductors, engineers and brakemen, who are already overburdened.
6. Because men smoke and play cards in trains. Is there any reason to believe that woman will behave better?

Here is another:
"Father, what is a Legislature?"
"A representative body elected by the people of the State."
"Are women people?"
"No, my son, criminals, lunatics, and women are not people."
"Do legislators legislate for nothing?"
"Oh, no; they are paid a salary."
"By whom?"
"By the people."
"Are women people?"
"Of course, my son, just as much as men are."

The following lines express the old dilemma as to how a man is to "represent" his women folk when they do not all think alike:

Representation
"I'm in a hard position for a perfect gentleman;
I want to please the ladies, but I don't see how I can.

My present wife's a suffragist, and counts on my support.
But my mother is an anti, of a rather biting sort;

One grandmother is on the fence, the other much opposed.
And my sister lives in Oregon, and thinks the question's closed.

Each one is counting on my vote to represent her view.
Now what should you think proper for a gentleman to do?

Those who have revelled in Mrs.
Miller's witty department in the New York Sunday Tribune will be glad to have this choice collection of its good things in book form. A. S. B.

MRS. SAMPSON DEAD

Mrs. Frances L. Sampson, wife of Ezra W. Sampson, died Saturday at the family home at 95, Washington street, Newtonville, following illness which had been prolonged since the middle of April. Mrs. Sampson, who was sixty-three years of age, was born in London, Eng., but came early in life to this country. She was the daughter of the late Edwin Field of Newtonville and of Alice (Hastings) Field, and she is survived by her mother and her husband, who was for twenty-seven years a teacher in the Newton High School and later taught for fifteen years in New York city. Mrs.
Sampson leaves also six children:
Miss Ethel V. Sampson, Miss Alice
Sampson, Harold M. Sampson and Miss Margaret Sampson, all of Newtonville;
Dr. Edwin P. Sampson of New York city, and Winslow S. Sampson of New Jersey.

Funeral services were held from her late home on Tuesday. Rev. J. C. Goddard, pastor of the New Church, officiating, and the interment was at Newton Cemetery.

mer home at Saratoga, N. Y., to officiate at the funeral service of Mr. George W. Bush this week on Tuesday.

—Mrs. A. C. Paschell, a well known for many years, and a resident of 239 Washington street, died on Wednesday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton. She is survived by a son and two daughters. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Lancaster, N. H.

—A Brackett & Son have been awarded $24,781.20 for damages caused to their business by the closing up of the Charles River by the new Anderson bridge near the Stadium. Brackett & Co. had leased a coal wharf on the river with 300 feet frontage. The commissioners awarded the Company $18,- 000 for the damage, $3400 for loss of fixtures, and $3381.20 for interest.

Many men are going to vote for the woman suffrage amendment in the fall as a silent tribute to Mary or Jane at home doing commonplace things, but very important things for home, husband and children.

Enabling Women to Vote be Approved and Ratified

YES

NOVEMBER 1915!

This is the date and equal suffrage is the issue to be voted upon by the men of our state. Every thinking woman has her hopes high and is trusting to the integrity of our Massachusetts men.

The question of equal political rights for both men and women is mainly an ethical or moral question. Suppression is the very worst kind of slavery and mental suppression is unbearable. No human being has any right to suppress the expression of the ideas of another, by withholding the ballot from women the men are exerting that unethical and unlawful power.
Women are awake and they must be heard and heeded just as men are.

The professions are open to women, why not the ballot? If a woman has brains enough to be a good doctor, lawyer, or everyman survey her vote is a valuable one; her judgment is needed in our government which was intended to be by all the people, for all the people.

The educative side of the ballot should be borne in mind. The wise woman will cast the wise vote but the unwise woman through her mistake will be learning just as the men are learning. If they vote a fraud into office they suffer and their children suffer and the next time they may know better. Many people have to learn through mistakes but the wonderful thing is that we are capable of learning. May our women not have this same opportunity?

A woman's education should not stop when she leaves the school-room, and the ballot will help to keep her alert and informed about everything pertaining to her country, state or town. Her social conscience is just as important a factor in her life as it is in the life of a man. She is thinking in more general terms than men used to. When a measure is adopted, she is wondering if that particular measure is the best measure for that particular purpose.

The woman's viewpoint is no longer narrow, she may be just as skilled in her household duties as a woman should be, yet even so, she can grasp and is interested in the world's affairs. She now sees the inter-relationship of her heart and the street. She knows that if one is to be a proper happy parent for children to grow in that the father must also be. These are thoughts which come to the intelligent loving mother and those interested particularly in the rearing of children.

The class of women who are bread-winners are also most eagerly awaiting their political emancipation. They know that their vote will swell their pay envelopes, that the ways, hours and means of performing their day's work will be affected by their voice in the regulation of industry, they know that their vote against child labor will be heard and counted, in their favor.

The man has been blamed for the working woman, she has had man-caps to meet and heavy ones; the pioneer bread-winners, outside of the four walls of home, were not heard in the highest esteem that is due the woman who toils.

Men's ideas of women in business are changing, she is a very important factor in his success, and this he is conceding more and more every day.
How much a bright stenographer could tell you of the management and detail of her employer's business and how much responsibility he trusts upon her.

Man needs no defence, she is taking her stand in life now, and it is reasonable to expect, that the men in this enlightened state are willing to put the most helpful of all tools, the ballot, into her hands. It is a square proposition and a square deal must follow. The true democracy that Lincoln loved, is coming, both men and women making it possible.

Churches are about to bring an important issue in this direction and lead the East, a signal honor much to be cherished and made use of.

The question has arisen; if women in those warring countries had been voters would there have been war?
Some eager, earnest suffragists would answer no, promptly, but there is much to consider before attempting an answer.

If equal suffrage had been long established in those countries, the supposition is, that there would have been no war. A woman seems to know the value of life. It is always her purpose to preserve life, to guard and guide the young, she loves to maintain order. Suffering is something that she would always prevent, she knows the horrors of war without any illustrations and she is not bringing up children to have them become brutes, either for their kings or countries.

There is a higher valor than fighting and she knows it. She is a Hague Tribunal herself, every day, between her boy and her neighbor's. Her's is the guiding hand, leading out of the brute passions into the light, where real progress can be made.

The very boy whose angry passions she has helped to overcome may be the rarest kind of a musician or artist and at any rate he will be of real value to the world if she can give him an early spiritual awakening. This she knows.

Fighting belongs to the animal world not to the human. We may not agree with certain ideas of a friend but if we know how to enjoy that friend we will ignore the difference and with that difference eliminated from our thoughts, find that we are still good comrades. This is the policy that nations should pursue for after all, the ethical standards of nations and people should be alike.

We are needing the woman's hand and heart more sorely than ever, in all government and perhaps the wars will show that the gentler influences must have full play which can only be obtained through co-operation with women.

Women are not superior to men.

THE "NEW MAN" IN EUROPE AND AMERICA

We have heard much of the new woman who wishes to throw off all the "shackles" which bind her, and become something resembling either a neuter, or an imitation of man. "The Case for Woman Suffrage" which is published by the National College Equal Suffrage League and sold by the National American Woman Suffrage Association tells us that woman suffrage will be a great help toward doing away with womanly characteristics. It says on page 64:

"Too many advocates of woman suffrage insist that when woman is enfranchised she will be no less 'womanly' than before, whereas in point of fact perhaps the chief thing to be said for the suffrage is precisely that it will make woman less womanly, in the commonly accepted sense of the term. For the development of woman as a human being will inevitably cause many of the qualities that have hitherto differentiated her from man to occupy a smaller relative place in her being. One cannot argue logically on woman suffrage without facing this fact." Quite true—one cannot.

We have heard much less about the New Man, but Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale, one of the most popular speakers on suffrage platforms, tells us about him in her recent book "What Women Want". She says that the numbers of New Men are increasing yearly, and that it is an important fact for women to realize that it is in America that the New Man is most rapidly developing. This New Man, she tells us,
"must unlearn the deep rooted habits and instincts of his sex." He has to "tear down this ancient edifice, and build upon its site a mansion so different from the old that his architectural knowledge may well falter"; but he is doing it—that is the great fact. "Every male instinct of domination and sovereignty has to be bred out of the individual before he can attain the status of the new man, and be a fit mate for the new woman," she tells us.

This then is "what women want", according to the suffragists—and they believe it, and are attaining it. For the schools of the country are largely in the hands of the suffragists. In the public schools they have the guidance of most of the next generation of men during the plastic, formative years.
They are educating a breed of men which is "to unlearn the deep rooted habits and instincts of his sex," who is to have "bred out of him every male instinct of domination and sovereignty."
How do you like the idea?

According to Miss Jane Addams, recently returned from her "peace at any price" visit to European courts, the young men of Europe must be largely "new men". She says that this present war is an old man's war—that the young men did not want the war, do not believe in it, that the middle aged people are forcing the young men to fight; that they are so unwilling that it is necessary for the authorities to "dope" the soldiers before they will go into battle. She asks us in other words to believe that the young men of England rather than fight were willing that Belgium should be devastated, England's pledges broken, and England herself, invaded and subjected to foreign rule. She asks us to believe that the young men of France were willing to let the enemy march into Paris and annex la belle France, so deeply loved by earlier generations, as a province of the German crown. If this is true, surely the "new man" has arrived in Europe.

"Every male instinct of domination and sovereignty" as well as every instinct to protect the women of his race and his native land are most successfully bred out of him. The European Feminists are to be congratulated on their success.

Miss Addams also asks us to believe that the middle aged men in Europe knowing themselves safe from the necessity of fighting, have undertaken this war as a means of forcing the young men into it. In other words, that the fathers stay comfortably at home while they send their unwilling sons off to be killed. This is the sort of hideous untruth which the sex antagonism engendered by suffrage produces. If Miss Addams can believe that the hundreds of French and English fathers who have lost only sons, or every son in battle, have not made a more bitter sacrifice than it would have been to lay down their own lives, then she is indeed utterly contaminated by the movement for which she has become a professional agitator.

The conditions which will obtain in this country when the New Man has developed in sufficient numbers, and the New Woman has assumed control of things is vividly portrayed by Gertrude Atherton in the Yale Review of April 1915. She is writing of the indifference of American girls in the western states to their political and economic awakening. She says:

"The determination of these women to live as men do waxes, and they despise the ordinary woman whole-heartedly. Now the logical result of this attitude to life will be their cold blooded use of men in every way. There will be women publishers, bankers, brokers, ward politicians, managers of big business, with thousands of subdued males under their heel. Their private morals will depend entirely upon their normal tendencies, secret principles and the time left on their hands.

"If they are by nature chaste or imbued with ideals, they obey those laws of their own minds; and if they are not, they obey other dictates. When women have achieved full liberty, in other words fully found themselves, they will be just as sharp and overreaching as conditions and the law permit. The weaker or less resourceful will drop to the underworld as today, but those women of brains and character that deliberately select the open for their talents instead of the home, will fight man at his own game, and it may be rout him, dispossess him, eat him up."

Mrs. Atherton predicts that by that time "women may be as strong of body as men, as the pit brow women of Lancashire are today. The men may have grown flabby of mind as of body, demoralized by their humiliations."

This then is the goal toward which feminism is tending. This type of New Man is, according to one of the most popular suffrage speakers in the country, what women want. What does the American man think of this proposed metamorphosis? How does he like the thing his sons are to be made over into?

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate

By virtue of and pursuant to the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Levi L. Tower of Newton in the County of Middlesex and Commonwealth of Massachusetts to J. Franklin Faxon of Quincy in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth, dated February 4, 1907, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds Book 3280 Page 395, and for breach of the condition of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described, which are the same premises described in said mortgage, upon Wednesday the 25th day of August 1915 at eleven o'clock A. M.

A certain parcel of land situated in that part of said Newton called Newton Centre and bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the Westerly line of Parker Street at land of Eagles and Stearns and thence running Southerly on said Parker Street four hundred and twenty feet more or less to land now or formerly of one Cunningham; thence turning and running Westerly on said land of Cunningham two hundred and forty feet more or less to a corner; thence turning and running Southerly on said land of Cunningham and land of owners unknown about three hundred and thirty-eight feet to a corner; thence turning and running Northwesterly by land of owners unknown about three hundred and sixty feet to a corner; thence turning and running Northwesterly by land of owners unknown about two hundred and ten feet to a corner in the wall; thence turning and running Northwesterly as the wall stands about one hundred and five feet to a corner; thence turning and running Northwesterly by land of owners unknown about two hundred and ten feet to a corner; thence turning and running Westerly on land of owners unknown about four hundred and thirty-two feet to land of one Stone; thence turning and running Northwesterly by said land of one Stone about nine hundred and twenty feet to a corner; thence turning and running Northwesterly again by land of owners unknown three hundred and thirty feet to the Southerly line of Boylston Street; thence turning and running Easterly by said Boylston Street about eighteen hundred and seventy-five feet to land now or late of Harriet A. Clark; thence turning and running Southerly by said land of Harriet A. Clark about one hundred and one and 40-100 feet to a corner; thence turning and running Easterly by said land of Harriet A. Clark one hundred feet to a corner; thence turning and running a little West of South by said land of Harriet A. Clark one hundred and thirty-five feet to the Northerly line of Oakdale Road; thence running across said Oakdale Road, forty feet to a corner of the land of Adey; thence running Southerly by said land of Adey one hundred and twenty-five feet to a corner; thence running Westerly by land of owners unknown and by land of Stearns one hundred and eighty one and 50-200 feet to a corner of said land of Stearns; thence running Southerly by said land of Stearns across Parker Avenue and by other land of said Stearns two hundred and sixty-five feet to the most Southwesterly corner of said land of Stearns; thence running Easterly by said land of Stearns about eighty-eight feet to a corner; thence running Northwesterly by said land of Stearns about twenty-five feet to land of Charles C. Stearns; thence running Easterly by land of Stearns and of Stearns and Eagles two hundred and twenty-five feet to the Westerly line of said Parker Street and the point of beginning. Containing from 57 to 60 acres, more or less. The above-described premises are partly shown on a plan of building lots of said Newton, Mass., dated July 1906 to be recorded with Middlesex (South District) deeds. Excepting however from the above-described premises a certain parcel of land situated on the Southerly side of said Boylston Street being lots numbered Eight to Fifteen inclusive on a plan made by E. S. Smith Surveyor dated September 1, 1906, for a full description of said parcel see deed given by Clinton E. Achorn et al to Alfred A. Sherman dated September 12, 1906 recorded with said deeds book 3254 page 475. Excepting also from the above premises lots numbered Five, Six and Twenty-one on the plan first above-mentioned. Being the same premises conveyed to said Tower by Clinton A. Achorn and A. Alexander Achorn his wife in her right; all said premises being conveyed together with and subject to the rights of way set forth or mentioned in said deed to Tower and subject also to any rights of way over the streets shown on said first mentioned plan.

The premises are sold subject to any unpaid taxes or assessments. One Thousand Dollars to be paid at the time of sale; other terms to be announced at the time of the sale.

WELD ESTATE

West Roxbury

West Roxbury is, at the present time, one of the most attractive suburban areas in or around Boston for residential purposes, both on account of its many natural beauties, and on account of its excellent transportation facilities. The building of the elevated structure to Forest Hills with fast and frequent service from all parts of the District to the heart of the City, has brought hundreds of "Home-seekers" to West Roxbury. The supply of houses already built has proven vastly inadequate to the demand, so that all desirable building land is fast being bought up and built on by Home-seekers and investors, as houses and apartments are in great demand at good prices.

Warren F. Freeman, of 18 Tremont street, Boston, and 1785 Centre street, corner Willow street, West Roxbury, has charge of the largest high grade development West Roxbury has ever seen, which is known as the "Weld Estate". It contains about fifty-five acres of the best building land in the City limits. It is high, dry and slightly, with numberless shade and apple trees and picturesque stone walls. It is divided into home sites containing from 5500 to 10,000 square feet each, with an average frontage of from 55 to 70 ft. and a depth of 100 to 150 ft. All lots are so restricted as to insure a congenial neighborhood for residential purposes, certain sections being restricted to single family houses, while other sections are restricted to single and two-family houses, but under no conditions will the much despised three-family house be allowed on any part of the property.

Real Coffee

Most people prefer to buy things that are GENUINE. That's why so many folks are buying "White House" because there's no doubt about ITS honest purity.

The Exploits of Elaine

A Detective Novel and a Motion Picture Drama

By ARTHUR B. REEVE
The Well-Known Novelist and the Creator of the "Craig Kennedy" Stories

Presented in Collaboration With the Pathe Players and the Eclectic Film Company

SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders of prominent men. The principal clue to the murderer is the warning letter which is sent the victims signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend, Jameson, a newspaper man. Kennedy frustrates a daring attempt to rob a jewelry store and rescues Elaine from a boiler where she had been imprisoned by the thugs.

FOURTH EPISODE

The Frozen Safe.

Kennedy swung open the door of our taxicab as we pulled up, safe at last, before the Dodge mansion, after the rescue of Elaine from the brutal machinations of the Clutching Hand.

Bennett was on the step of the cab in a moment, and together, one on each side of Elaine, they assisted her out of the car and up the steps to the house.

Elaine's Aunt Josephine was waiting for us in the drawing-room, very much worried. The dear old lady was quite scandalized as Elaine excitedly told of the thrilling events that had just taken place.

"And to think they—actually—carried you!" she exclaimed, horrified, adding, "And I not—"

"But Mr. Kennedy came along and saved me just in time," interrupted Elaine with a smile. "I was well chaperoned!"

Aunt Josephine turned to Craig, gratefully. "How can I ever thank you enough, Mr. Kennedy," she said fervently.

Kennedy was quite embarrassed. With a smile, Elaine perceived his discomfort, not at all displeased by it. "Come into the library!" she cried gayly, taking his arm. "I've something to show you."

Where the old safe, which had been burnt through, had stood, was now a brand-new safe of the very latest construction and design—one of those globular safes that look and are so formidable.

"Here is the new safe," she pointed out brightly. "It is not only proof against explosives, but between the plates is a lining that is proof against thermit and even that oxyacetylene blowpipe by which you rescued me from the old boiler. It has a time clock, too, that will prevent its being opened at night, even if any one should learn the combination."

They stood before the safe a moment, and Kennedy examined it closely with much interest.

"Wonderful!" he admired. "I knew you'd approve of it," cried Elaine, much pleased. "Now I have something else to show you."

She paused at the desk, and from a drawer took out a portfolio of large photographs. They were very handsome photographs of herself.

"Much more wonderful than the safe," remarked Craig earnestly. Then, hesitating and a trifle embarrassed, he added, "May I—may I have one?"

"If you care for it," she said, dropping her eyes, then glancing up at him quickly.

"Care for it?" he repeated. "It will be one of the greatest treasures—"

She slipped the picture quickly into an envelope. "Come," she interrupted. "Aunt Josephine will be wondering where we are. She—she's a demon chaperon."

Bennett, Aunt Josephine and myself were talking earnestly as Elaine and Craig returned.

That morning I had noticed Kennedy fussing some time at the door of our apartment before we went over to the laboratory. As nearly as I could make out he had placed something under the rug at the door out into the hallway.

"Well," said Bennett, glancing at his watch and rising as he turned to Elaine. "I'm afraid I must go now."

He crossed over to where she stood and shook hands. There was no doubt that Bennett was very much smitten by his fair client.

"Good-by, Mr. Bennett," she murmured, "and I thank you so much for what you have done for me today."

But there was something lifeless about the words. She turned quickly to Craig, who had remained standing. "Must you go too, Mr. Kennedy?" she asked, noticing his position.

"I'm afraid Mr. Jameson and I must get back on the job before this Clutching Hand gets busy again," he replied reluctantly.

"Oh, I hope you—we get them soon!" she exclaimed, and there was nothing lifeless about the way she gave Craig her hand, as Bennett, he and I left a moment later.

When we approached our door, now, Craig paused. By pressing a little concealed button he caused a panel in the wall outside to loosen, disclosing a small, boxlike plate in the wall underneath.

It was about a foot long and perhaps four inches wide. Through it ran a piece of paper which unrolled from one coil and wound up on another, actuated by clockwork. Across the blank white paper ran an ink line traced by a stylographic pen, used as I had seen in mechanical pencils used in offices, hotels, banks and such places.

Kennedy examined the thing with interest.

"What is it?" I asked. "A new kinograph," he replied, still gazing carefully at the rolled-up part of the paper. "I have installed it because it registers every footstep on the floor of our apartment. We can't be too careful with this Clutching Hand. I want to know whether we have had any visitors or not in our absence. This straight line indicates that we have not. Wait a moment."

Craig hastily unlocked the door and entered. Inside I could see him in the pen had started to trace its line, no longer even and straight, but zigzag, at different heights across the paper. He came to the door. "What do you think of it?" he inquired.

"Some idea," I answered enthusiastically. "We entered and I fell to work on a special Sunday story that I had been forced to neglect. I was not so busy, however, that I did not notice out of the corner of my eye that Kennedy had taken from its cover Elaine Dodge's picture and was gazing at it ravenously."

I had finished as much of the article as I could do then and was smoking and reading it over. Kennedy was still gazing at the picture Miss Dodge had given him, then moving from place to place about the room, evidently wondering where it would look best. I doubt whether he had done another blessed thing since we returned.

He tried it on the mantel. That wouldn't do. At last he held it up beside a picture of Galton, I think, of finger print and eugenics fame, who hung on the wall directly opposite the fireplace. Hastily he compared the two. Elaine's picture was precisely the same size.

Next he tore out the picture of the scientist and threw it carelessly into the fireplace. Then he placed Elaine's picture in its place and hung it up again, standing off to admire it.

I watched him gleefully. Was this Craig? Purposely I moved my elbow suddenly and pushed a book with a bang on the floor. Kennedy actually jumped. I picked up the book with a muttered apology. No, this was not the same old Craig.

Perhaps half an hour later I was still reading. Kennedy was now pacing up and down the room, apparently unable to concentrate his mind on any but one subject.

He stopped a moment before the photograph, looked at it fixedly. Then he started his methodical walk again, hesitated, and went over to the telephone, calling a number which I recognized.

"She must have been pretty well done up by her experience," he said apologetically, catching my eye. "I was wondering if—hello!—oh, Miss Dodge—I—er—I—er—just called up to see if you were all right."

Craig was very much embarrassed, but also very much in earnest.

A musical laugh rippled over the telephone. "Yes, I'm all right, thank you, Mr. Kennedy—and I put the package you sent me into the safe, but—"

"Package?" frowned Craig. "Why, I sent you no package, Miss Dodge. In the safe?"

"Why, yes, and the safe is all covered with moisture—and so cold."

"Moisture—cold?" he repeated hastily.

"Yes. I have been wondering if it is all right. In fact, I was going to call you up, only I was afraid you'd think I was foolish."

"I shall be right over," he answered hastily, clapping the receiver back on its hook. "Walter," he added, seizing his hat and coat, "come on—hurry!"

A few minutes later we drove up in a taxi before the Dodge house and rang the bell.

Jennings admitted us sleepily.

"It could not have been long after we left Miss Dodge, late in the afternoon, that Susie Martin, who had been quite worried over our long absence after the attempt to rob her father, dropped in on Elaine. Wide-eyed, she had listened to Elaine's story of what had happened."

"And you think this Clutching Hand has never recovered the incriminating papers that caused him to murder your father?" asked Susie.

Elaine shook her head. "No. Let me show you the new safe I've bought. Mr. Kennedy thinks it wonderful."

"I should think you'd be proud of it," admired Susie. "I must tell father to get one, too."

At that very moment, if they had known it, the Clutching Hand, with his sinister, masked face, was peering at the two girls from the other side of the portieres.

Susie rose to go and Elaine followed her to the door. No sooner had she gone than the Clutching Hand came out from behind the curtains. He gazed about a moment, then, moving over to the safe about which the two girls had been talking, stealthily examined it.

He must have heard someone coming, for with a gesture of hate at the safe itself, as though he personified it, he slipped back of the curtains again.

Elaine had returned, and as she sat down at the desk to go over some papers which Bennett had left relative to settling up the estate the masked intruder stealthily and silently withdrew.

"A package for you, Miss Dodge," announced Michael later in the evening, as Elaine, in her dainty evening gown, was still engaged in going over the papers. He carried it in his hands rather gingerly.

"Mr. Kennedy sent it, ma'am. He says it contains clues, and will you please put it in the new safe for him."

Elaine took the package eagerly and examined it. Then she pulled open the little round door of the globular safe.

"It must be getting cold out, Michael," she remarked. "This package is as cold as ice."

"It is, ma'am," answered Michael. She closed the safe, and, with a glance at her watch, set the time lock and went upstairs to her room.

No sooner had Elaine disappeared than Michael appeared again, catlike through the curtains from the drawing-room, and, after a glance about the dimly lighted library, discovering that the coast was clear, motioned to a figure hiding behind the portieres.

A moment and Clutching Hand himself came out.

He moved over to the safe and looked it over. Then he put out his hand and touched it.

"Listen!" cautioned Michael.

Someone was coming, and they hastily slunk behind the protecting portieres. It was Marie, Elaine's maid. She turned up the lights and went over to the desk for a book for which Elaine had evidently sent her. She paused and appeared to be listening. Then she went to the door.

"Jennings!" she beckoned.

"What is it, Marie?" he replied.

She said nothing, but as he came up the hall led him to the center of the room.

"Listen! I heard sighs and groans!" Jennings looked at her a moment, puzzled, then laughed. "You girls!" he exclaimed. "I suppose you'll always think the library haunted now."

"But, Jennings, listen," she persisted. Jennings did listen. Sure enough, there were sounds, weird, uncanny. He gazed about the room. It was eerie. Then he took a few steps toward the safe. Marie put her hand to it and started back.

"Why, that safe is all covered with cold sweat!" she cried with bated breath.

Sure enough, the face of the safe was beaded with dampness. Jennings put his hand on it and quickly drew it away, leaving a mark on the dampness.

"W-what do you think of that?" he gasped.

"I'm going to tell Miss Dodge," cried Marie, genuinely frightened.

A moment later she burst into Elaine's room.

"What is the matter, Marie?" asked Elaine, laying down her book. "You look as if you had seen a ghost."

"Ah, but mademoiselle—it ees just like that. The safe—if mademoiselle

"The safe—if mademoiselle

"The safe—if mademoiselle

"The safe—if mademoiselle

"The safe—if mademoiselle

"The safe—if mademoiselle

face moved in and took a position in the center of the room, as if on guard, while Clutching Hand sat before the safe watching it intently.

"Someone at the door—Jennings is answering the bell," Michael whispered hoarsely.

"Confound it!" muttered Clutching Hand, as both moved again behind the heavy velvet curtains.

"I'm so glad to see you, Mr. Kennedy," greeted Elaine unaffectedly as Jennings admitted us.

She had heard the bell and was coming downstairs as we entered. We three moved toward the library and someone switched on the lights.

Craig strode over to the safe. The cold sweat on it had now turned to icicles. Craig's face clouded with thought as he examined it more closely. There was actually a groaning sound from within.

"It can't be opened," he said to himself. "The time lock is set for tomorrow morning."

Outside, if we had not been so absorbed in the present mystery, we might have seen Michael and the Clutching Hand listening to us. Clutching Hand looked hastily at his watch.

"The deuce!" he muttered under his breath, stifling his suppressed fury.

We stood looking at the safe. Kennedy was deeply interested. Elaine standing close beside him. Suddenly he seemed to make up his mind.

"Quick—Elaine!" he cried, taking her arm. "Stand back!"

We all retreated. The safe door, powerful as it was, had actually begun to warp and bend. The plates were bulging. A moment later, with a loud report and concussion, the door blew off.

A blast of cold air and flakes like snow flew out. Papers were scattered on every side.

We stood gazing, aghast, a second, then ran forward. Kennedy quickly examined the safe. He bent down and from the wreck took up a package, now covered with white.

As quickly he dropped it.

"That is the package that was sent," cried Elaine.

Taking it in a table cover, he laid it on the table and opened it. Inside was a peculiar shape flask, open at the top, but like a vacuum bottle.

"A Dewar flask!" ejaculated Craig.

"What is it?" asked Elaine, appealing to him.

"Liquid air!" he answered. "As it evaporated, the terrific pressure of expanding air in the safe increased until it blew out the door. That is what caused the cold sweating and the groans."

We watched him, startled.

On the other side of the portieres Michael and Clutching Hand waited. Then, in the general confusion, Clutching Hand slowly disappeared, folloed.

"Where did this package come from?" asked Kennedy of Jennings suspiciously.

Jennings looked blank.

"Why," put in Elaine. "Michael brought it to me."

"Get Michael," ordered Kennedy. A moment later he returned. "I found him, going upstairs," reported Jennings, leading Michael in.

"Where did you get this package?" shot out Kennedy.

"It was left at the door, sir, by a boy, sir."

Question after question could not shake that simple, stolid sentence. Kennedy frowned.

"You may go," he said finally, as if reserving something for Michael later.

A sudden exclamation followed from Elaine as Michael passed down the hall again. She had moved over to the desk, during the questioning, and was leaning against it.

Inadvertently she had touched an envelope. It was addressed, "Craig Kennedy."

Craig tore it open, Elaine bending anxiously over his shoulder, frightened. We read:

"YOU HAVE INTERFERED FOR THE LAST TIME. IT IS THE END."

Beneath it stood the fearsome sign of the Clutching Hand!

The warning of the Clutching Hand had no other effect on Kennedy than the redoubling of his precautions for safety. Nothing further happened that night, however, and the next morning found us early at the laboratory.

It was the late forenoon, when, after a hurried trip down to the office, I rejoined Kennedy at his scientific workshop.

We walked down the street when a big limousine shot past. Kennedy stopped in the middle of a remark. He had recognized the car, with a sort of instinct.

At the same moment I saw a smiling face at the window of the car. It was Elaine Dodge.

The car stopped in something less than twice its length and then backed toward us.

Kennedy, hat off, was at the window in a moment. There were Aunt Josephine and Susie Martin, also.

"Where are you boys going?" asked Elaine, with interest, then added with a gayety that ill concealed her real anxiety, "I'm so glad to see you—to see that—er—nothing has happened from the dreadful Clutching Hand."

"Why, we were just going up to our rooms," replied Kennedy.

"Can't we drive you around?"

We climbed in and a moment later were off. The ride was only too short for Kennedy. We stepped out in front of our apartment and stood chatting for a moment.

"Some day I want to show you the laboratory," Craig was saying.

"It must be so—interesting!" exclaimed Elaine very enthusiastically.

"Think of all the bad men you must have caught!"

Elaine hesitated. "Would you like to see it?" she wheedled of Aunt Josephine.

Aunt Josephine nodded acquiescence, and a moment later we all entered the building.

"You—you are very careful since that last warning?" asked Elaine as we approached our door.

"More than ever—now," replied Craig. "I have made up my mind to win."

Kennedy had started to unlock the door, when he stopped short.

"See," he said, "this is a precaution I have just installed. I almost forgot in the excitement."

He pressed a panel and disclosed the boxlike apparatus.

"This is my kinograph, which tells me whether I have had any visitors in my absence. If the pen traces a straight line, it is all right; but if—hello—Walter, the line is wavy."

We exchanged a significant glance.

"Would you mind—er—standing down the hall just a bit while I enter?" asked Craig.

"Be careful," cautioned Elaine.

He unlocked the door, standing off to one side. Then he extended his hand across the doorway. Still nothing happened.

Ing happened. There was not a sound. He looked cautiously into the room. Apparently there was nothing.

It had been about the middle of the morning that an express wagon had pulled up sharply before our apartment.

"Mr. Kennedy live here?" asked one of the expressmen, descending with his helper and approaching our janitor, Jens Jensen, a typical Swede, who was coming up out of the basement.

Jens growled a surly, "Yes—but Mr. Kennedy, he bane out."

"Too bad—we've got this large cabinet he ordered from Grand Rapids. We can't cart it around all day. Can't you let us in so we can leave it?"

Jensen muttered: "Well—I guess it bane all right."

They took the cabinet off the wagon and carried it upstairs. Jensen opened our door, still grumbling, and they placed the heavy cabinet in the living room.

"Sign here."

"You fallers bane a nuisance," protested Jens, signing nevertheless.

Scarcely had the sound of their footfalls died away in the outside hallway when the door of the cabinet slowly opened and a masked face protruded, gazing about the room.

It was the Clutching Hand!

From the cabinet he took a large package wrapped in newspapers. As he held it, looking keenly about, his eye rested on Elaine's picture. A moment he looked at it, then quickly at the fireplace opposite.

An idea seemed to occur to him. He took the package to the fireplace, removed the screen and laid the package over the andirons with one end pointing out into the room.

Next he took from the cabinet a couple of storage batteries and a coil of wire. Deftly and quickly he fixed them on the package.

Meanwhile, before an alleyway across the street and further down the long block the express wagon had stopped.

Having completed fixing the batteries and wires, Clutching Hand ran the wires along the molding on the wall overhead, from the fireplace until he was directly over Elaine's picture. Skillfully he managed to fix the wires, using them in place of the picture wires to support the framed photograph until it hung very noticeably askew on the wall.

The last wire joined, he looked about the room, then noiselessly moved to the window and raised the shade.

Quickly he raised his hand and brought the fingers slowly together. It was the sign.

Off in the alley, the express driver and his helper jumped into the wagon and away it rattled.

Jensen was smoking placidly as the wagon pulled up the second time.

"Sorry," said the driver sheepishly, "but we delivered the cabinet to the wrong Mr. Kennedy."

He pulled out the inevitable book to prove it.

"Wall, you bane fine fallers," growled Jensen, puffing like a furnace, in his fury. "You cannot go up again."

"We'll get fired for the mistake," pleaded the helper.

"Just this once," urged the driver, as he rattled some loose change in his pocket. "Here—there goes a whole day's tips."

He handed Jens a dollar in small change.

Still grumpy, but mollified by the silver, Jens let them go up and opened the door to our rooms again. There stood the cabinet, as outwardly innocent as when it came in.

Lugging and tugging they managed to get the heavy piece of furniture out and downstairs again, loading it on the wagon. Then they drove off with it, accompanied by a parting volley from Jensen.

In an unfrequented street, perhaps half a mile away, the wagon stopped. With a keen glance around, the driver and his helper made sure that no one was about.

"Such a shaking up as you've given me!" growled a voice as the cabinet door opened. "But I've got him this time!"

It was the Clutching Hand.

Craig gazed into our living room cautiously.

"I can't see anything wrong," he said to me, as I stood just beside him. "Miss Dodge," he added, "will you and the rest excuse me if I ask you to wait just a moment longer?"

Elaine watched him, fascinated. He crossed the room, then went into each of our other rooms. Apparently nothing was wrong and a minute later he reappeared at the doorway.

"I guess it's all right," he said. "Perhaps it was only Jensen, the janitor."

Elaine, Aunt Josephine and Susie Martin entered. Craig placed chairs for them, but still I could see that he was uneasy. From time to time, while they were admiring one of our treasures after another, he glanced about suspiciously.

"What is the trouble, do you think?" asked Elaine wonderingly, noticing his manner.

"I—I can't just say," answered Craig, trying to appear easy.

neighboring churches and at three o'clock they chanted the office of the dead. The body lay in state until 8 o'clock yesterday morning and was viewed by thousands of people. During this time there was a guard of honor composed of eight representatives from the Knights of Columbus, the Hibernians, the Foresters and the Holy Name Society.

At eight o'clock yesterday morning there was a solemn high mass for the children, celebrated by Father Malone.

At ten o'clock a solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated before a distinguished audience which filled the church to overflowing. Cardinal O'Connell, who was present, with his guard of honor was met at the church gate by an escort of forty uniformed Knights of Columbus. He was attended by Rt. Rev. Mgr. William O'Brien of St. Rt. Rev. Mgr. William O'Brien of St. Patrick's Church, Lowell, and Rt. Rev. Mgr. Peter Ronan, P. R., of St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill, as chaplain.

Bishop Anderson was attended by Rt. Rev. Mgr. John B. Peterson, president of St. John's Ecclesiastical Seminary, Brighton, and Rt. Rev. Mgr. Ambrose F. Roche, of St. Patrick's Church, Watertown, as chaplains, while Rt. Rev. Mgr. P. J. Supple, of St. John's Church, Roxbury, was chaplain to Bishop Foley of the Philippine Islands.

The mass was celebrated by Rev. M. T. McManus, of Brookline, with Rev. J. F. Gilfeather of West Lynn, deacon, Rev. D. C. Riordan of Newton Centre, sub deacon, and Rev. A. S. Malone, master of ceremonies. One hundred priests occupied seats at the right of the altar and fifty sisters were at the left.

Fr. Dolan's life and his efforts in behalf of those under his spiritual care were eulogized at the close of the service by Cardinal O'Connell. The Cardinal paid tribute to the quiet but priestly life of the deceased pastor, dwelling upon the zeal that he had always manifested in behalf of those under his care, and he pointed out how absolutely indifferent had been the life of Fr. Dolan so far as earthly honors or rewards were concerned.

Fr. Dolan's life had been one which characterized him as the true priest, having his ideas and caring not for the world and its doings. He thought first, last and all of the time, of the spiritual welfare of his people and he did this work in a quiet, saintly and unobtrusive way.

He never sought praise for anything that he accomplished and cared little for earthly reward, being content with the knowledge that he was working and accomplishing something for God, whom he so faithfully tried to serve.

The Cardinal's eulogy of Fr. Dolan was very impressive and his words were uttered with a depth of feeling.

During the solemn high mass of requiem the musical accompaniment was rendered by the priest's choir under the direction of Rev. Fr. M. J. Scanlan, diocesan director of the Charity Bureau, while J. Frank Driscoll, director of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross sanctuary choir, was organist.

At the conclusion of the mass, the body was taken to St. Patrick's cemetery, Lowell, accompanied by over twenty automobiles, and escorted to the Watertown line by the Knights of Columbus. There was a large attendance at the cemetery where the office of the dead was chanted by Rev. Fr. Kelly and assisting priests.

The pall bearers were Messrs. P. A. Murray, George M. Cranitch, Joseph F. Flanagan, Andrew McFadden, Dr. Joseph Stanton, Charles Murphy, Dr. T. F. Carroll of Lowell, and Edward Begley.

THE FOLIAGE OF SUMMER

The foliage of summer is generally mature, green, sober. There is a certain warmth and gaiety about the leaf-progress of June and early July, and a vast variety in shades, as well, so that any body of trees and shrubs of varying kinds will display anything from the youngest light yellow leaves of the Norway maples to the deep, even green of the horse-chestnuts.

Toward the first of August, the leaves are quite or nearly fullgrown, and they have settled down to their real work of elaborating food for the trees that bear them.

My water-color friend, Little, has discovered in this color maturity another confirmation of his theory that there is a sort of color compensation, a chromatic balance, of the seasons. In spring, the air and the ground are cool, though slowly absorbing heat, and the leaves and flowers are warm in hue—there are the really hot colors of the tulips, the yellows of some tree blossoms and so on. As the season warms, the foliage and flower hues become in general cooler, until in summer we have the deep green of mature leaves, the deep blue of the white-dotted sky, and the blues and whites of the garden. When cooler nights begin to come, the summer foliage is likely to assume hints of brown, the shadows on the snow—J. Horace McFarland in The Countryside Magazine for July.

NORUMBEGA PARK

Next week a musical version of H. A. DeSouchet play "My friend from India" has been booked. Walter E. Gordon and a company of clever comedians, singers and dancers present this rather oriental masterpiece. The Zoological Garden with its large Monkey House and other features always attracts attention. Especially interesting are the bear cubs in their play house, the baby monkey and the baby lynx. Excellent service and cuisine is found in the Grape Arbor Cafe where Orchestra Concerts are given every afternoon and evening. A host of other attractions are ready to interest the visitor.

TREMONT THEATRE—Announcement of the last four weeks of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont corn takes on the colors of maturity, and we have the decidedly warm-hued chrysanthemums, purple asters, and the like to compensate. The sharp weather of winter demands all possible heat from nature's color scheme, and we have it in the browned leaf, following the brilliant and not cool hues of autumn, in the corn-shock and the bare tree stem, and even in the shadows on the snow—J. Horace McFarland in The Countryside Magazine for July.

DEATH OF MR. TOLMAN

Mr. James P. Tolman, one of the best known residents of West Newton for over thirty years, died on Wednesday at his home on Highland street as the result of an attack of apoplexy three months ago. Mr. Tolman was born in Boston, November 7, 1847, and was the son of James and Elizabeth M. S. Tolman. He was educated in the public schools of Boston and entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, from which he graduated with the first class sent out from that institution in 1868. He entered business life and for some years was superintendent of the Silver Lake Cordage Co. on Watertown and Nevada streets, Newtonville. He then organized and for the past thirty years has been president of the Samson Cordage Co. He was a trustee of the Franklin Savings Bank, and a member of the corporation of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and in the success of which he was deeply interested. He was always a loyal member of the West Newton Unitarian church and served upon its standing committee and as one of its trustees.

Mr. Tolman married Mary C. Cheney in 1880 and is survived by her and two sons, Richard C. Tolman of Berkeley, Cal., and Edward C. Tolman of West Newton, and by a step-daughter, Mrs. Albert P. Carter of Newtonville. Funeral services will be held from his late home on Highland street, West Newton, tomorrow afternoon at 2.15 o'clock.

NEW TRANSCONTINENTAL GUIDE-BOOKS

United States Geological Survey Issues Illustrated Books of Information on Varied Subjects

The United States Geological Survey has just issued a guidebook describing the Overland Route from Missouri River to the Pacific coast, and every traveler may now enjoy the luxury of being "personally conducted" without any other expense than the dollar he must send to the Superintendent of Documents at Washington, D. C., to obtain a copy. It is Secretary Lane's desire that the transcontinental journey, by whatever route, shall afford the traveler an intimate acquaintance with the country through which he passes, and this volume, therefore, is the first of four which will appear in rapid succession. The next to come, that covering the Northern Pacific Route, so closely identified with the Lewis and Clark expedition of 1803-1805, will be published in a few days; and those describing the Santa Fe route and the Shasta and Coast Route will follow soon.

The value of these guides to travelers interested in their country can not be measured. The route is followed from station to station, and the country along the way described and explained from many points of view. Human history, geologic history, agricultural and mining values—everything, in short, that can make a car window landscape vital and interesting—is succinctly and rapidly sketched. The long stretches of prairie country and endless miles of desert, often so dreary to the uniform traveler, are made to team with human interest and scientific information.

One region may afford a livelihood for only a pastoral people; another may be capable of intensive agriculture; still another may contain hidden sources of mineral wealth which may attract large industrial development; and taken together these varied resources afford the promise of continued prosperity for this or that State. The guidebooks are full of items of general interest that will answer such questions as the average intelligent traveler is continually asking. In a broad way the story of the West is a unit, and the aim of this description of the western United States is to meet the needs of the American citizen who desires to understand what he sees.

In the preparation of the book on the Overland Route (Bulletin 612) much information already in the possession of the Geological Survey has been utilized, but to supplement this material three geologists last year made a field examination of the entire route, while special topographic surveys for the accompanying maps were made by Survey engineers. The route is covered by a series of 29 complete and accurate maps, which are so arranged that the reader can unfold them one by one and keep each map in view while he is reading the text relating to the portion of the route it represents.

The book is also freely illustrated with half-tone plates of some of the most striking views and objects to be seen on the journey and with pictures of prehistoric animals that inhabited the West in ages past, when Nebraska and Colorado, for instance, were huge swamps frequented by strange beasts whose fossil remains are now found in the rocks formed from the sand and mud of the ancient swamps, which have since been elevated thousands of feet. The book of 244 pages is as a whole distinctly popular in character. In ordering the Overland Route guidebook from the Superintendent of Documents ask for Bulletin 612 and inclose $1.
